Prospecting time

Yes, I was a prospector. When I first started collecting baseball cards in the early 1980s I would try to make a quick buck by purchasing multiple cards of the current year's rookies with the hope that the cards would increase in value. I would page through Hobby publications searching for ads from dealers who were selling quantities of individual cards. When I found the ads, I would look to see what price dealers placed on each rookie card.

If I felt the price of the card for a rookie or rookies left room for an increase in value based on what knew about that player, I'd purchase a few of them. Only once did I purchase rookie cards in quantities of more than 25, and I got burned. I won't go into details on those purchases since I have previously written about that in Sports Collectors Digest.

I don't prospect anymore, but I know there are a lot of collectors out there who still prospect for rookies each year. To help collectors make good decisions about which rookies to chase after, this issue of SCD includes our annual look at the top rookies expected to make an impact in

Two of the top rookies – Vladimir Guerrero Jr. and Fernando Tatis Jr. – are sons of former big leaguers. Prospectors have been following their minor league careers for several years now, and scooping up their cards along the way.

Prospecting for rookies has changed since I was doing it in the 1980s. Back then, my hope was to see the cards increase in value by a few bucks. That was the best case scenario. Now, if a prospector hits on the right rookie and purchases as many autograph cards of that rookie as they can, they can see the value of the cards increase by hundreds of dollars.

As with any type of risk, whenever there is an opportunity for a big reward, there is also the change for failure.

Good luck to all the collectors out there who are prospecting for rookies this year.

Speaking of big rewards, our cover story in this issue of SCD is about a recent hobby find of Exhibit Supply Company cards. The cards were tucked away in coin operated arcade machines that dispensed the cards for a penny. The cards weren't discovered until the two arcade machines were purchased by Rich Wolfin and he opened the machines.

SCD freelance writer George Vrechek spoke with Wolfin about the discovery and shares that information. Vrechek also shares a listing of which cards were found in the arcade machines, as well as his thoughts about when the cards were printed.

There are plenty of other great articles in this issue, so make sure to take the time to read them all. ♦

HANES AND MICHAEL JORDAN CELEBRATE 30-YEAR PARTNERSHIP WITH SPECIAL TRADING CARD PROMOTION

– Michael Jordan and Hanes? Nothing else feels so right – for three decades.

It all started in 1989. Jordan scored the 10,000th point in his basketball career and hit “The Shot,” one of the most dramatic NBA playoff series winning buzzer beaters in the history of the sport. It was also the year that Jordan and Hanes first teamed up and told consumers that, “Nothing else feels so right.”

The partnership between two icons from North Carolina was meant to be – and has stood the test of time, according to Sidney Falken, chief branding officer for HanesBrands.

“Michael has always had his pick of brands to endorse, and we are incredibly honored that he has chosen to stay with ours for the past three decades,” Falken said. “This is one of the longest-running and most successful partnerships of its type to date – a powerful statement about Michael and Hanes.”

To celebrate the 30th year of the basketball legend and his favorite underwear brand, Hanes is launching a promotion designed to be a slam dunk for consumers. Beginning March 11, more than 800,000 specially marked bonus packs of Hanes men’s underwear, including Comfort Flex Fit boxer briefs, will contain a pack of 30th Anniversary Michael Jordan trading cards.

A total of 170 different Fleer trading cards have been produced by The Upper Deck Company, each with a picture of Jordan from one of his Hanes advertisements on the front and vital statistics and fun facts on the back. Cards are inserted randomly in five-card packs. Ten lucky consumers will find a rare Michael Jordan autograph card in their packs.

“Through the years, we’ve certainly benefitted from Michael’s enduring popularity with such a wide audience,” Falken said. “MJ continues to be one of the most recognizable people in the world, and we’re thrilled he’s working with us to make the world a more comfortable place.”

Reflecting on 30 years with the company, Jordan said: “I’ve always had a special bond with Hanes and the people there. We’ve been together for a long time now spreading the word about comfort, style and innovation – and filming some fun commercials along the way. It’s truly been a great relationship, and I’m happy to be celebrating this milestone with them.”

A limited number of bonus packs with trading cards are available on the Hanes website and across all retail channels – from dollar to department stores, both in store and online. Consumers can find the bonus packs in special displays that feature visuals of the cards in Kohl’s, JC Penney, Walmart, Meijer, Kmart and Dollar General.

PRESS PASS COLLECTIBLES SIGNS MAGIC JOHNSON TO EXCLUSIVE MEMORABILIA PARTNERSHIP

– Press Pass Collectibles (PPC), a division of Bell Sports Marketing, has announced an exclusive long-term memorabilia partnership with NBA legend Earvin “Magic” Johnson.

Johnson’s first-ever exclusive memorabilia deal, the partnership will allow PPC to become the sole distributor of highly sought-after Magic Johnson autographed collectibles. The partnership will provide fans and memorabilia collectors around the world access to the largest selection of officially licensed items including signed basketballs, jerseys, photos, and more from one of greatest athletes to play the game.

Johnson’s NBA career included five NBA championships, three NBA MVP Awards, twelve All-Star games, and two inductions into the Basketball Hall of Fame. Johnson was also honored as one of the 50 Greatest Players in NBA History in 1996.

Since his retirement as an NBA player, Johnson has successfully parlayed his skills and tenacity from the court into the business world as Chairman and CEO of Magic Johnson Enterprises (MJE). Combined with his solidified status as an NBA legend, the demand for Johnson’s autographed sports memorabilia will only increase in the future.

“We are thrilled to welcome Magic to the PPC family,” said PPC President Kyle Bell. “We have worked with him many times over the years and this exclusive long-term partnership was a natural next step to protect and grow the Magic Johnson autograph brand.”

Johnson joins comedic legend Chevy Chase as an exclusive PPC memorabilia client.

In addition to the full collection of authentic signed Magic Johnson memorabilia already available on presspasscollectibles.com, PPC will be offering retail and wholesale opportunities for upcoming public and private Magic Johnson signings, as well as corporate signing appearances and custom corporate autographed items. ♦

STILL KICKIN' and PICKIN'! WE ARE GOING ON THE ROAD TO BUY your SPORTS CARDS!

The van isn't as new as it once was (but then again neither are Kevin and Pat...). Well anyway, we have decided to take the silver beast out on the road throughout the United States - March 25th thru April 30th - to buy vintage cards, collections, hoards, and accumulations. We will be in Cleveland (March 29th thru March 31st), Arizona and Colorado (April 4 thru April 7th), West Virginia (April 28th), and South Carolina (April 29, 30). We will also be "freestyling" around the countryside many other days – trying to make our story interesting enough to get a TV show of our own someday ("Still kickin' and pickin'")...(not really...we just want to buy your old ball cards....)

IT'S TROUT TIME AGAIN — A new baseball season is upon us, and one of the key storylines will be the continuing development of Mike Trout. Now 27, he's at the start of the three-season span often considered to be an athlete's peak years. Yet he's also been in the majors seven full seasons and part of another, so he's well-seasoned. And so far, he's given us quite a show: 240 homers, 189 steals, a .307 average and nightly highlight films both at the plate and in center field. So what's next?

Among those tuned in closely are baseball collectors—who as a group have been all over Trout since he was a 19-year-old call-up in 2011. That's why we're seeing sales like the No. 3 item on our Top 10 list: a 2009 Bowman Sterling Black Refractor rookie card of Trout that sold for $40,353. Marked #22 of 25, the rarity inspired 79 bids. At No. 9 on our list: a 2009 Bowman Chrome Blue Refractor that brought $25,655, helped along by its 9.5 BGS grade. And just outside our list is another Trout 2009 Chrome Refractor (see "On the Outside," below).

Here's a sampling of big prices paid recently for other Trout treasures (beyond the 2009 Bowman Chrome family). Each of these items will end up being bargains if the Angels' slugger maintains his career trajectory thus far:

- $13,226 on 54 bids: 2011 Bowman Chrome signed Orange Refractor (BGS 9.5).

- $8,326 on 41 bids: 2011 Topps Update (BGS 10): $12,000 in a Buy It Now deal. Another, also graded BGS 10.

- $7,200 on 36 bids: 2009 Bowman Sterling Prospects autographed Gold Refractor (#5/50, BGS 9.5).

- $6,700 on 49 bids: 2011 Topps Finest signed Gold Refractor (#40/75, BGS

Top Ten Online Auctions

1. $45,000: 2007-08 Upper Deck Exquisite Kevin Durant, #6/99, auto patch (BGS 9)
2. $41,371: 1933 Goudey Nap Lajoie (PSA 4.5)
3. $40,353: 2009 Bowman Mike Trout Sterling Black Refractor, #22/25, auto (PSA 10)
4. $28,801: 1934 Goudey Lou Gehrig (PSA 8)
5. $28,101: 1955 Topps Sandy Koufax (PSA 8.5)
6. $27,800: 1956 Topps Mickey Mantle (SGC 9)
7. $27,600: 1954 Topps Henry Aaron (PSA 8)
8. $26,000: 1986-87 Fleer Michael Jordan (PSA 10)
9. $25,655: 2009 Bowman Chrome Mike Trout Blue Refractor, auto (BGS 9.5, auto 10)
10. $25,020: E98 "Hans" Honus Wagner, red background (PSA 9) $9.5).

- $4,901 on 61 bids: 2017 Topps Definitive Autograph Relics patch card (#1/1, BGS 9.5).

MICKEY IN '54 — We see heavy bidding on Mickey Mantle 1951 and 1952 cards, and also his 1953 card. But how about his friendly looking 1954 Bowman? An amazingly clean specimen of that card recently inspired 34 bids that pushed it to $17,150. The card had been graded PSA 8, boasting sharp corners and balanced centering along with bright coloring.

The reverse of the card notes that Mantle was "the man who brought bubblegum and the tape measure to national prominence. He hit a homer out of Griffith Stadium in Washington, which was measured at 565 feet." The card text also noted that "a picture of Mickey blowing bubbles in the outfield was printed in papers across the country." And, as we know, Mantle was the face of bubblegum cards in the 1950s.

Lesser-condition examples of the card have sold recently for $2,850, $2,521 and $2,500—all PSA 7s. And a PSA 6 recently brought $1,750.

MAYFIELD RISING — Never mind Tom Brady; an eBay seller put up a Baker Mayfield 2018 Panini National Treasures autographed patch card (#6/6) in mid-March and enjoyed some healthy bidding action. The sale culminated in a surprising price: $15,601 on 57 bids.

Imagine the card's value years from now if Mayfield builds on his impressive rookie year. In 2018, his first pro season, he started 13 games for Cleveland, winning six games while throwing for 3,725 yards and 27 TDs (vs. 14 interceptions).

BACK TO SHAQ — There was a time, starting in the early 1990s and spanning into the mid-2000s, that Shaquille O'Neal was the king of the NBA world. Michael Jordan was winding down, and Shaq was bidding to fill those big shoes. Playing with the Magic and then the Lakers between the 1992-93 and 2003-04 seasons, the 7-foot-1, 325-pounder averaged 27.1 points and 12 rebounds a game. He later went on to Miami, Phoenix, Cleveland and Boston, finishing his career with the 2010-11 season and leaving with a 23.7 scoring average and 10.9 rebounding average.

All along, collectors loved the big man. Shaq's face became a regular on hobby magazine covers, and his hoop cards and his autograph became hotly desired items.

We bring up Shaq because of the sale in March of a rare 2018-19 Impeccable Championships card issued by Panini. Marked #2 of 4, the card features an autograph next to a colorful and true il-illustration of Shaq while he was with the Lakers. The card drew 38 bids and sold for $2,025.

ON THE OUTSIDE — Let's give you a look at the 10 highest-selling eBay items outside our Top 10 chart. All fell between $17,000 and $23,000, paced by Babe Ruth and Mickey Mantle items.

Included on the list is a multiple-signature baseball that feels like a bargain at $20,000. The signers include a who's-who of early-20th-century baseball luminaries, including Ruth and five other Hall of Famers: Ty Cobb, Walter Johnson, Tris Speaker, Bucky Harris and Goose Goslin. Ruth and Johnson shared the sweet spot of the Official American League ball, which was authenticated by PSA/DNA. One of the signers, or the original owner, dated the ball "1926."

- $22,700: 1933 Goudey Babe Ruth #53 (PSA 6)
- $21,111: 1969 Topps Mickey Mantle, white-letter variation (PSA 8)
- $21,000: 2009-10 Panini National Treasures Stephen Curry Gold, /25, auto (BGS 8)
- $20,400: 2009 Bowman Chrome Mike Trout Refractor, auto (PSA 10)
- $20,108: 1953 Topps Mickey Mantle (SGC 8)
- $20,000: 1986-87 Fleer Michael Jordan (PSA 10)
- $20,000: 1999 Fleer Precious Metal Gems Derek Jeter /50 (PSA 10)

IN YER FACE! — Last time out, we showed off a vintage baseball program—from the July 16, 1914 game between the Red Sox and Tigers—that sold for $2,980 on 27 bids. Here's another classic—a favorite among baseball historians because it proves that trash talking is nothing new: the 1912 World Series "Official Score Card." It was issued by the NL champion New York Giants for their home games against the AL pennant-winning Boston Red Sox, and it features a wonderful illustration that reflects attitude and one-upsmanship.

The cover illustration gives us a patriot (representing the Red Sox) looking at a long scroll being held in one hand by Giants manager John J. McGraw. The top of the scroll reads "Our Record," followed by a year-by-year tally of the Giants' accomplishments. At a glance, you can see four 1st-place finishes, four 2nd-place finishes, one 3rd and one 4th.

The illustration of McGraw has him looking confident with, perhaps, a touch of arrogance.

Alas, the Giants lost the series, four games to three (with one tie). For the Red Sox, it was the perfect way to quiet their opponent's cockiness.

At press time, a seller was offering a vintage 1912 World Series scorecard at the Buy It Now price of $2,500. Fans frequently fold baseball scorecards and programs, and this one's no different; it bears "game-use" by the fan who used it—part of the patina.

Another seller listed an un-creased example of the program at a lower price—$1,499. The reason: It had benefited from some professional restoration. Still, it has no missing or loose pages. Plus, it bears a meticulously scored Game 6, which was won by the Giants behind pitching star Rube Marquard. The Giants also won the next game to knot up the Series, only to have Boston win a squeaker in the deciding eighth game, 3-2 in 10 innings. Smoky Joe Wood out-dueled Christy Mathewson in that one. ♦

PROSPECTING FOR ROOKIES

Vladimir Guerrero Jr. leads the 2019 MLB rookie class

It's a great time to be a baseball card collector who loves the challenge of finding the next big thing.

Whether it's a can't-miss player who ranks near the top of the prospects list or an undrafted late bloomer who turns out to be a diamond in the rough, the hunt is half the battle.

A big part of Lance Fischer's job is identifying major prospects and lining them up for signings with his company. The Onyx Authenticated, Inc. president and former scout for the Florida State football program has tracked his fair share of prospects over the years. He realizes how special this year's baseball crop is capable of being.

"The top five guys, according to Baseball America, I think those guys have so much potential," Fischer said. "In fact, I think the prospects this year and even last year are just some of the best prospects that I've seen in at least 15-20 years in a sense of the number of them. It's not like these guys are going to be flash in the pan, these are guys that are potentially future Hall of Famers. The talent level and the scouting that goes on now on these guys is unbelievable. With the technology now and the amount of eyes and the amount of testing and everything else that goes into the investment of these players at such a young age, the teams want to make sure that they're getting a guy that's going to be able to help the team."

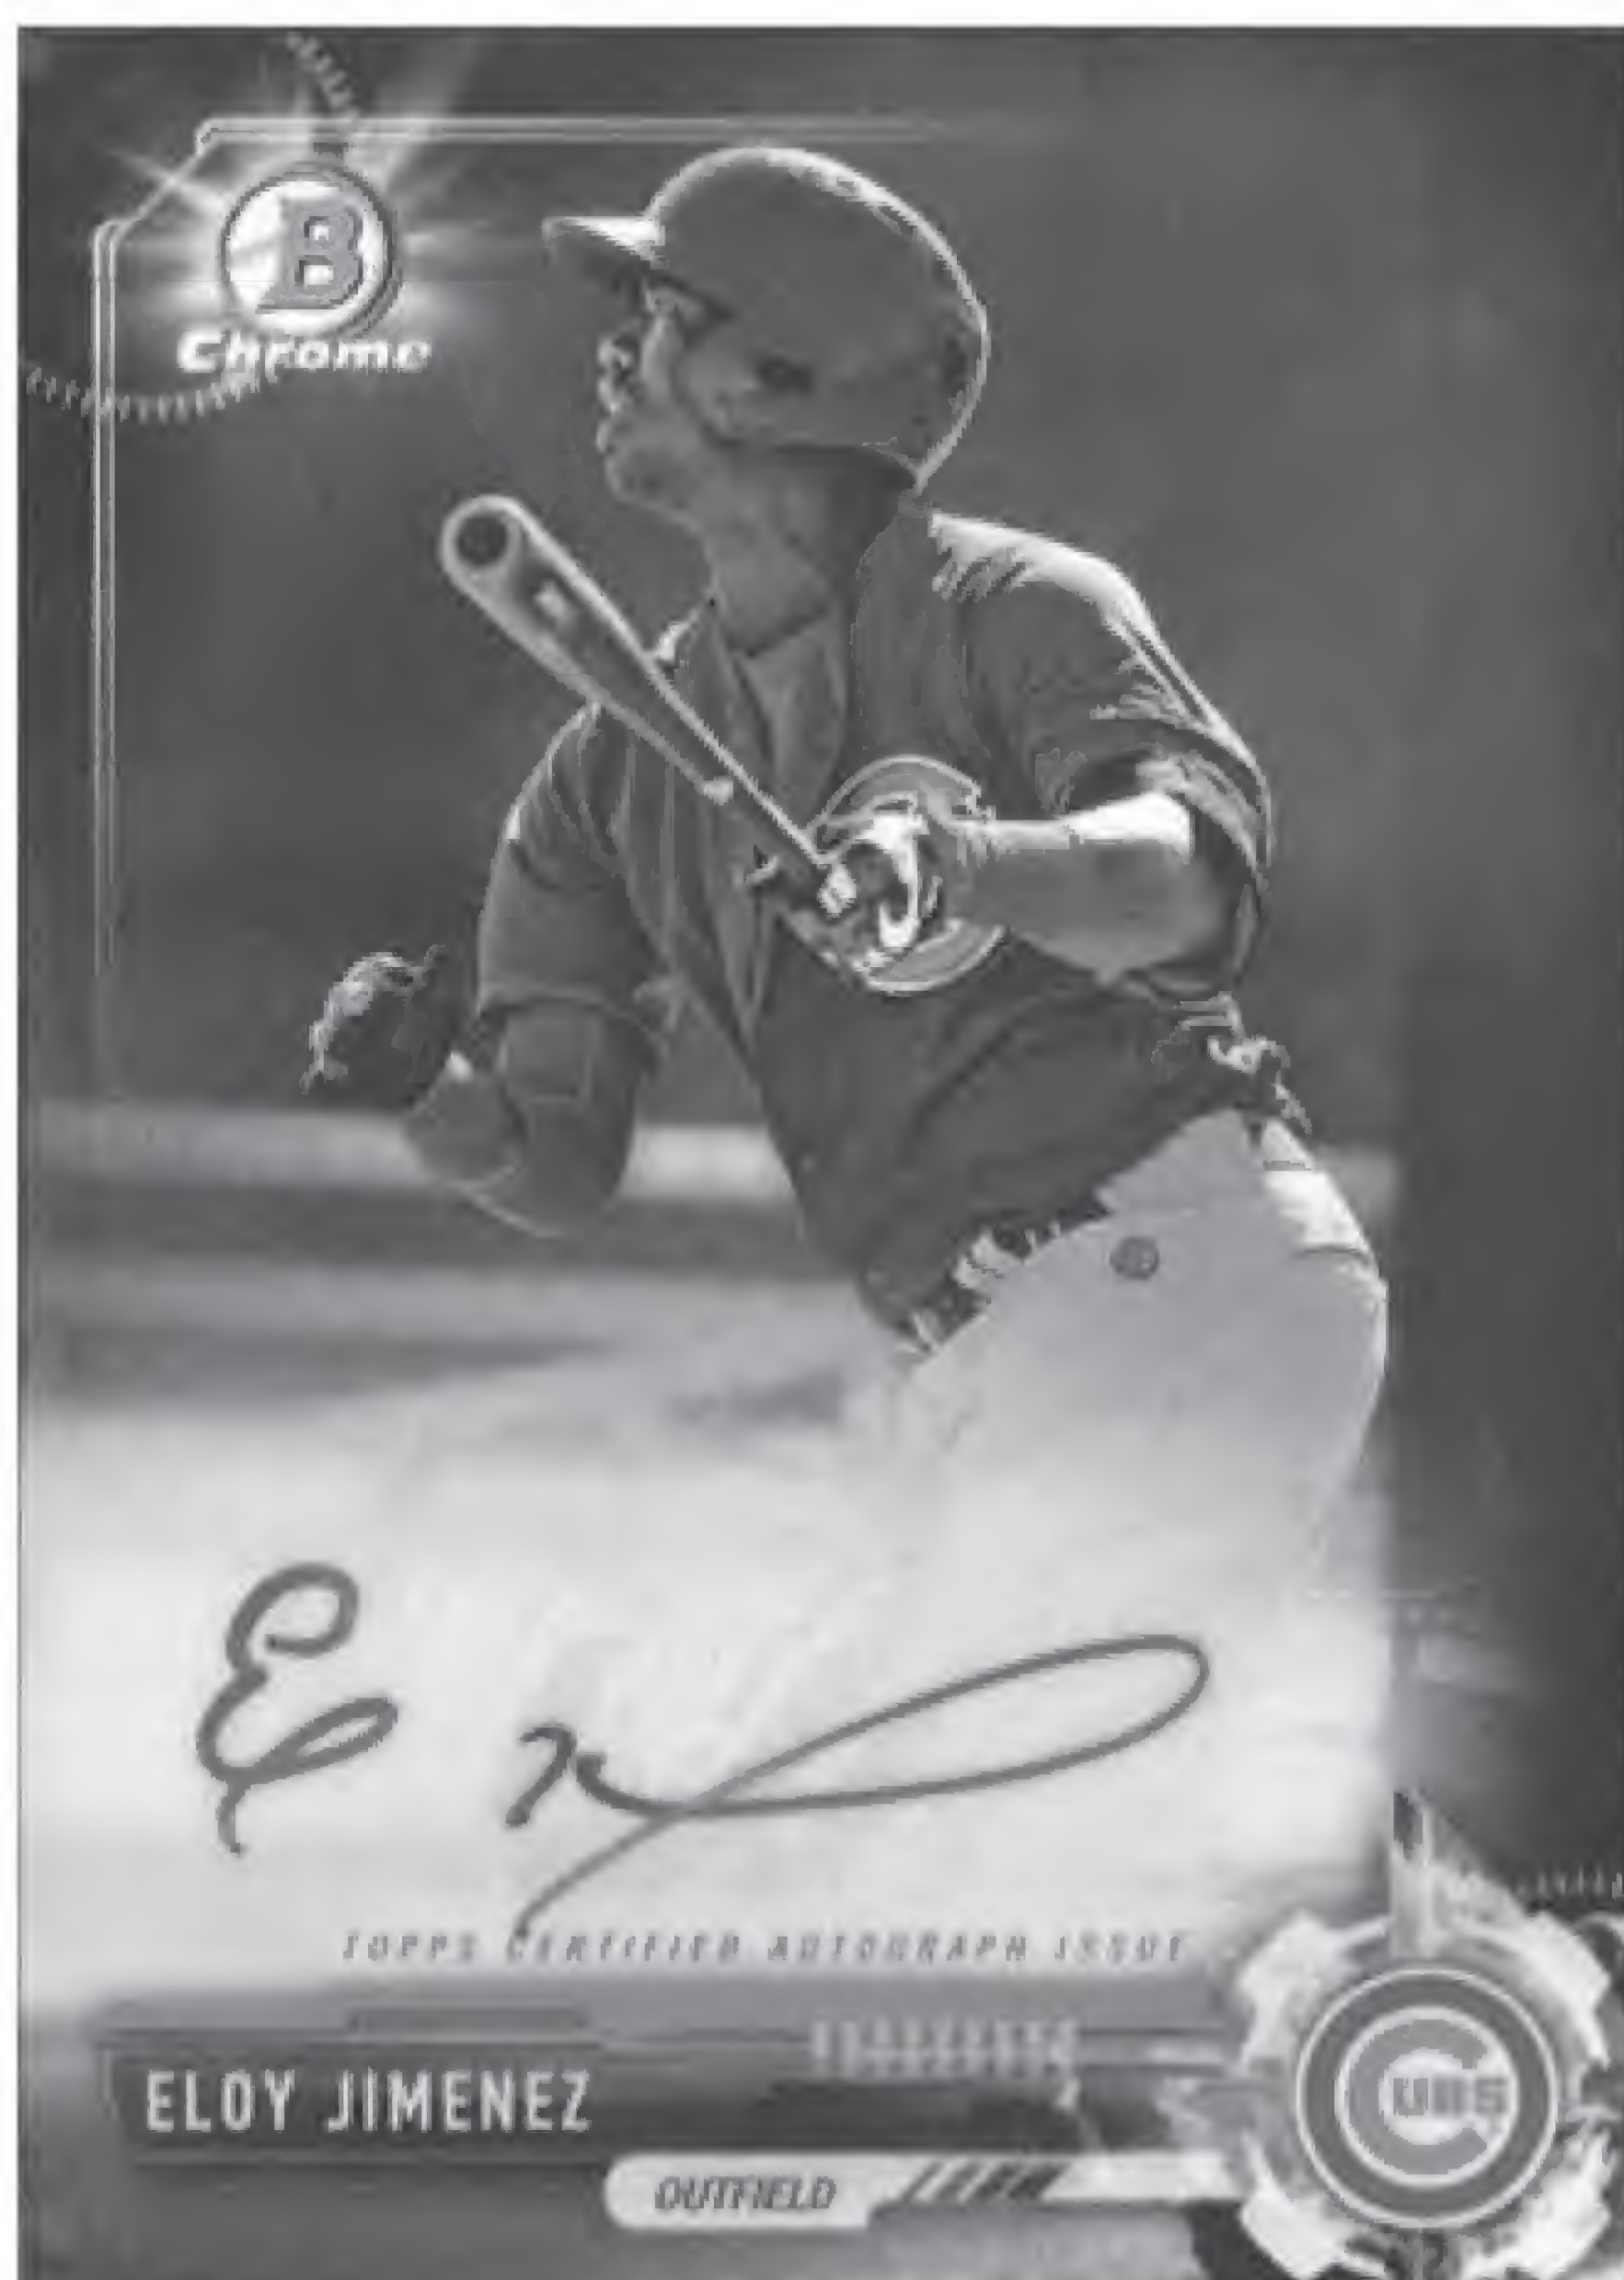

These top prospects have been preparing for a number of years to steal the show. Now is their time.

"Obviously, excited for that," Dave & Adam's Card World Product Manager Pat Blest said. "It's definitely going to be in a lot of baseball products, this prospect group that's coming through now."

The consensus No. 1 overall prospect this year by Baseball America and MLB.com is Toronto Blue Jays third baseman Vladimir Guerrero Jr. He is followed closely on MLB.com's list by San Diego Padres shortstop Fernando Tatis Jr. Both of their dads played big league ball.

MLB.com's Nos. 3-5 prospects are Chicago White Sox outfielder Eloy Jimenez, Washington Nationals outfielder Victor Robles and Minnesota Twins shortstop Royce Lewis.

Entering spring training, all the talk was about Guerrero, who just turned 20 on March 16.

"This a generational-type player," Blest said. "I think when you look at his level and you probably have to go back to guys like Bryce Harper, Alex Rodriguez, (Ken) Griffey (Jr.) – that's the kind of impact he's going to have right off the bat. I have no doubt that when he gets up to the majors, I'm assuming by the end of April we'll see him up there, he's going to make an impact right away and he's going to be a rookie of the year candidate, probably the clear favorite."

Blest believes Guerrero has the potential to be a batting champion and hit 30 home runs.

Guerrero, who is Baseball America's first No. 1 overall prospect to come from the Dominican Republic, ripped it up in the minors last year, hitting .381 with four teams. He's a big kid, listed at 200 pounds by the Blue Jays and 220 by baseball-reference.com, but in actuality could be closer to 250.

"The thing that always scared me about Vlady, though, is his weight," Fischer said. "He's really got to be careful of his weight. The kid's a talent, no question about it, but he's got to keep an eye on his weight. He could balloon pretty quick."

When players were matriculating to spring training camps in mid-February, Orlando Sports Cards South owner Kendall Loyd started to get his annual influx of customers. Fans heading to spring training games love to stop into the shop to pick up cards of prospects.

"Guerrero's ahead by a mile," Loyd said. "It's Guerrero then everybody else. It's really not even close. And we get a lot of Canadians down here, so there's another reason."

Loyd said Guerrero's cards are so high priced he can generally only get his hands on base rookies like his 2016 Bowman Chrome.

"He's desired pretty much all throughout the week," Loyd said. "He plays right down the road from my store."

Loyd has a friend who has been buying Guerrero cards since 2016 when the 17-year-old had autograph cards ranging from $60-$100.

"He stockpiled and he sent me a picture about a month ago and he has over 100 of his autographs," Loyd said. "He could become filthy rich if Guerrero keeps doing anything."

The No. 2 prospect on Blest's list is Jimenez. Traded from the crosstown rival Chicago Cubs in July 2017, the 22-year-old has power at the plate that has been compared to Yankees slugger Giancarlo Stanton.

"Eloy Jimenez in any other year would probably be the clear-cut No. 1 prospect but with Vlad in front of him he would come in No. 2 on my list," said Blest, who is expecting Jimenez to start the season in the minors but be called up to the majors relatively early. "You see what he did in the minors last year, he just crushed it. He's a potential .300 hitter, 40-plus home runs. He's going to bat in the middle of that lineup in Chicago for years to come."

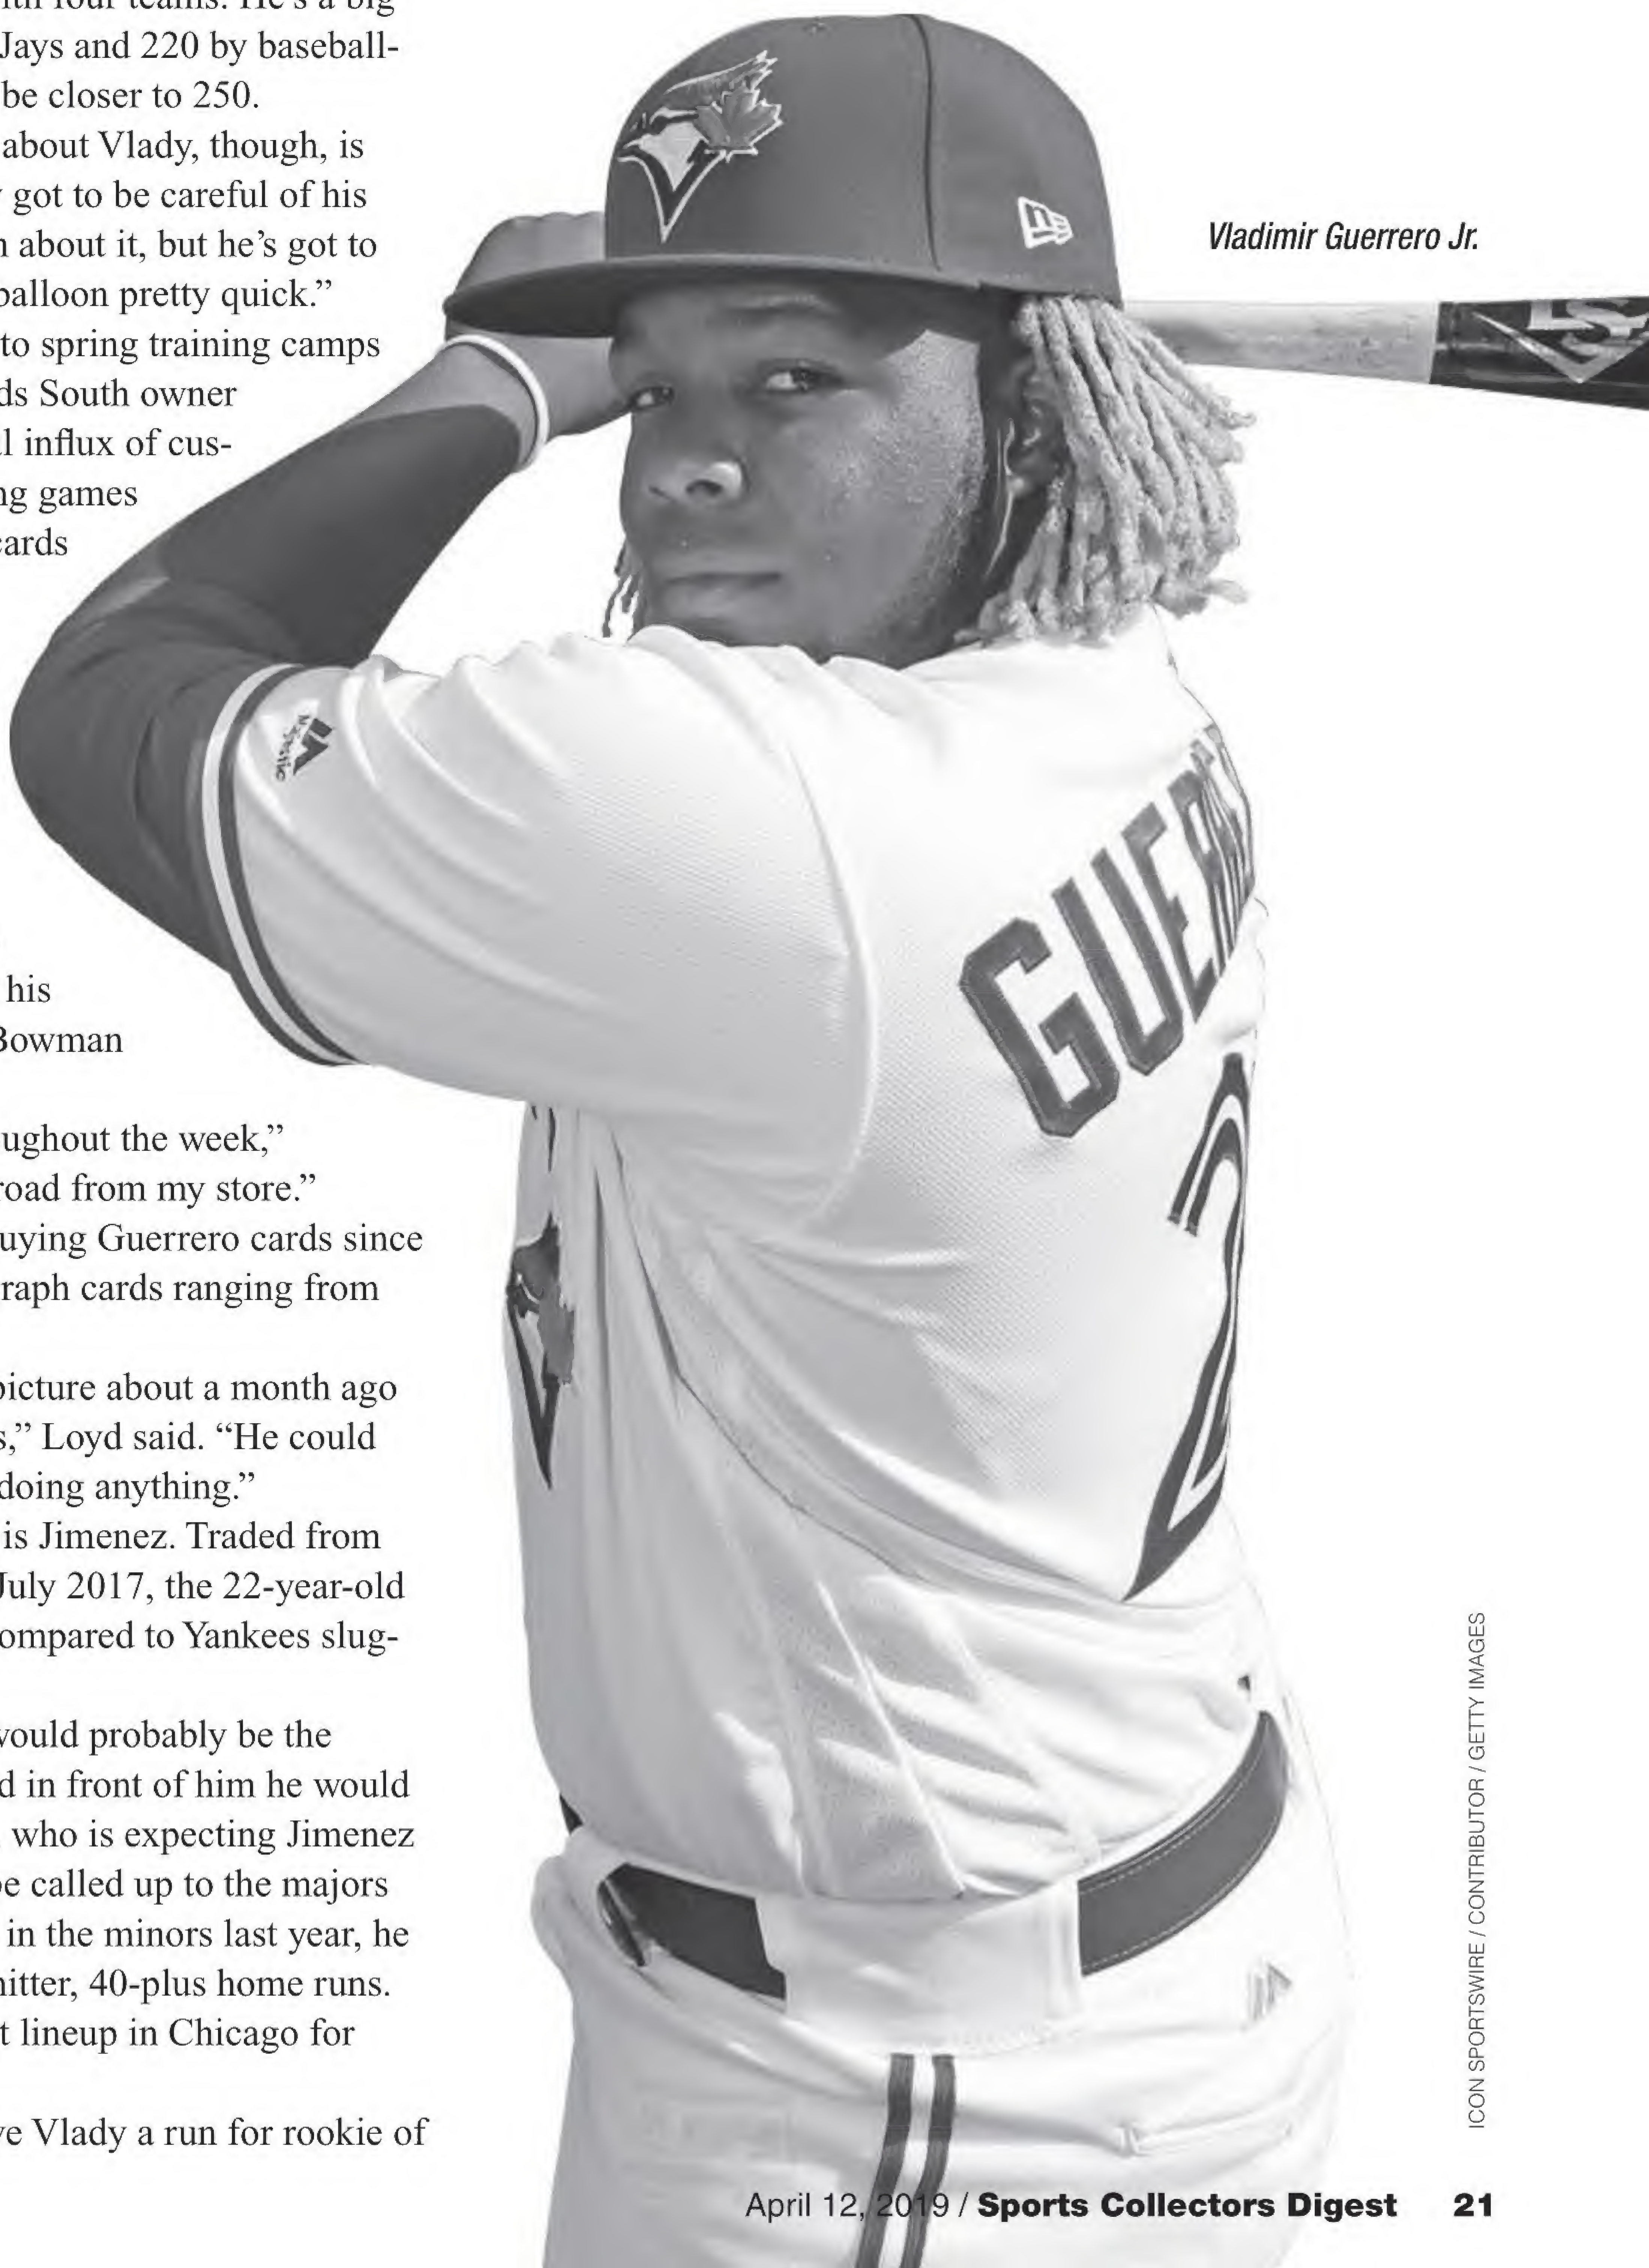

Said Fischer: "He could easily give Vlady a run for rookie of the year."

Blest has Tatis as the No. 3 overall prospect. The 20-year-old has shown early in his career he has quite a bit of pop in his bat.

"He didn't get many at-bats in the minors last year, but he obviously tore it up," Blest said. "His strikeout rate was a little high in the minors but I think that will improve. His skill level though, it's clear he can be a guy who's capable of hitting for average plus power. He should stick at shortstop and could be a perennial All-Star."

Out of the top three prospects, Blest said Guerrero and Jimenez have quite a bit of product on the market. Jimenez was in the 2013 international signing class, so his 2014 Bowman Vladimir Guerrero Jr.

Chrome Draft is considered his rookie card. Tatis doesn't have as much product on the market as the other two prospects, but his 2016 Bowman Chrome has been commanding high prices on eBay.

One player Fischer is extremely high on is MLB.com's No. 13 overall prospect Wander Franco. The Tampa Bay Rays shortstop has been turning heads since last year when he hit .351 with 57 RBI in his first minor league season. Franco just turned 18 on March 1.

"He'll be the top prospect in baseball if it's not the end of this year, he will be for sure at the beginning of next year," said Fischer, who had a signing with Franco early in spring training that will be included in 2019 Onyx Vintage Collection Baseball that will be released at the end of March. "He can hit the ball; he's going to develop some really good power. I think he's a guy that can definitely hit 30 home runs and bat over .300. I won't say he's the fastest guy on the base paths but he's got some speed. He may or may not stick at shortstop it just depends on how much he grows. He did things last year that a lot of guys hadn't done ever before in the low minors at such a young age."

Since he's just a teenager, Franco doesn't have a lot of cards on the market. Leaf just released a non-licensed product and Panini has Extra Elite Edition cards. Fischer is expecting a lot of Franco cards will be produced and he's one of the main faces tied to this year's Bowman Chrome slated for release in April.

"I think with the Bowman product his base stuff is going to be close to $200," Fischer said. "There's a lot of hype around him, and it's all justified."

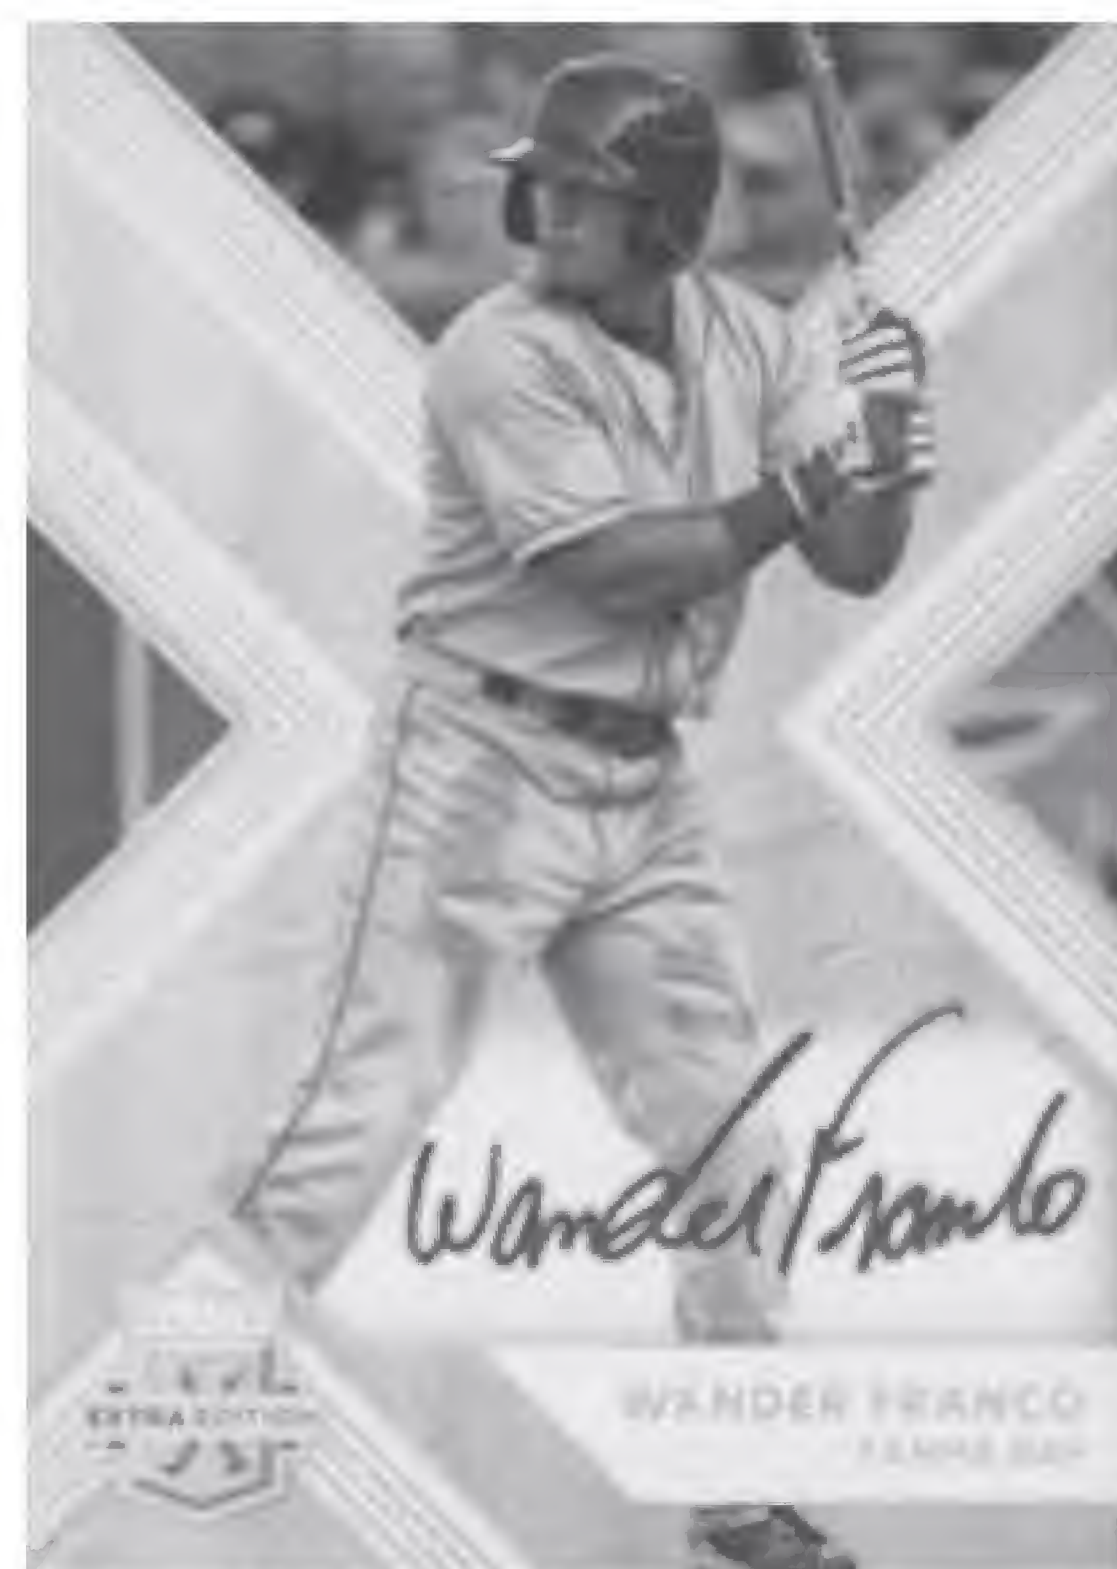

He added, "That kid's going to be a potential generational talent."

Another player generating plenty of chatter is Los Angeles Angels outfielder Jo Adell. A five-tool talent, Adell could give the Angels a phenomenal 1-2 punch with Mike Trout.

Loyd said a lot of collectors have been coming into his shop looking for Adell cards.

Victor Robles was a September callup last year for the Washington Nationals and could make an impact this year in centerfield.

Loyd is also high on Blue Jays shortstop Bo Bichette (ranked No. 11 in MLB.com's top 100) and Cincinnati Reds third baseman Nick Senzel (No. 6).

Blest really likes Minnesota Twins power hitter Alex Kirilloff (No. 9), Colorado Rockies infielder Brendan Rodgers (No. 10) and Cincinnati Reds outfielder Taylor Trammell (No. 16).

There are a couple pitchers extremely high on MLB.com's top 100, including Forrest Whitley of the Houston Astros (No. 7) and Jesus Luzardo of the Oakland A's (No. 12). Fischer thinks Rays pitcher Brent Honeywell is going to be really good for years to come despite having shoulder surgery last year.

Pitchers haven't been some of the highest rated players on the top 100 lists the last couple of years. That rings true this year.

"The number of hitters out there and guys that can really hit the ball is kind of unprecedented," Fischer said.

"There's just some guys that can really play and really hit that ball over the number of pitchers that are out there."

Said Blest: "The hitters always become front and center and the pitchers maybe fall to the wayside but I think the one thing we've seen over the years is you have guys like Jesus Luzardo for example who had Tommy John (surgery) and those guys are coming back and they're top prospects. Those injuries are no longer a setback really, you just know he's going to be out for a year and come back just as good if not better. But I think the hitters have surpassed the pitchers as far as collectability."

Because Nationals pitcher Stephen Strasburg was all the buzz in 2010 and then had arms issues, some prospectors now tend to shy away from pitchers because their careers could be done in an instant.

According to Loyd, cards for pitching prospects remain affordable, even for No. 1 overall picks such as Detroit Tigers' Casey Mize.

"All those guys are $8-$15 for an autograph, so you can take a chance," Loyd said. "It's different than a Tatis, whose autographs are probably $100, Jimenez $100 and Guerrero $300-$500. They're position players and they seem to pay more for them."

With so many standout prospects these days, there are some organizations that are completely stacked. In Baseball America's top 100 list, the Padres and Rays each have nine prospects. The Braves have eight and the Blue Jays seven.

"The Blue Jays are definitely up there. The Padres are putting together a pretty nice group of talent as well – they might be number one on a lot of peoples' list," Blest said. "Tampa Bay's got a solid group coming through with Wander Franco, Brett Honeywell, Brendan McKay. Atlanta, always strong. They've got a great group of pitchers: Ian Anderson, Mike Soroka, Kyle Wright, Touki Toussaint – those are all guys that could be in the rotation for years to come. And Austin

Riley at third base is another quality prospect. Doesn't seem fair, but Houston continues to find a way to add more talent to their system as well. Forrest Whitley, Kyle Tucker is a guy that I would think would be up there this year. The White Sox, Jimenez and Michael Kopech is coming back from Tommy John (surgery) and we'll see him next year. Dylan Cease is a pitcher that could make an impact in the rotation this year. He was the minor league pitcher of the year."

Fischer believes the top two minor league systems are the Padres and White Sox, which have both made some really solid trades in the last couple years to restock their supply.

"They're pretty deep," said Fischer about the Padres.

Loyd likes the Rays' prospect system with Franco, Honeywell, McKay and Jesus Sanchez.

"They're loaded," Loyd said. "They pretty much dumped everybody."

One under the radar organization is the Seattle Mariners with pitcher Justus Sheffield and outfield Jarred Kelenic, noted Fischer.

"The Mariners have got some guys that are young but have a lot of potential to make a difference," Fischer said. "They've got a kid, Julio Rodriguez, that I think is going to be really, really good. And then I mentioned Noelvi Marte is going to be really good."

Demanding big money

Even though the prospects have yet to prove themselves at the major league level, that doesn't mean card prices are low for these guys.

Prospectors are willing to pay the price for snatching up numbered and autographed cards of whom they hope will be future stars.

"I think what's happening is there's a lot of money in the economy. You've got a lot of people that are looking for investment opportunities and I think you've probably got groups, believe it or not, of investors that are sinking a lot of money in these guys because, as we both know with prospecting, you can have massive gains overnight," Fischer said. "The perfect example is Jonathan Loaisigi last year with the Yankees that gets called up, totally off the radar, nobody really even knows about this kid – gets called up to the Yankees and throws a one-hitter.

(Onyx was) the only ones that had his autograph card out there, and literally two days before him being called up you couldn't have gotten rid of a card for five bucks apiece. He does that and they're going for $200. I think that kind of return and opportunity and risk is what's really driving the prices and the number of investors into this industry."

In mid-March, a Guerrero 2016 Bowman Chrome gold refractor autograph card numbered to 50 graded a 10 for the card and autograph by Beckett was on eBay for $35,000. A Tatis 2016 Bowman Chrome orange refractor autograph card numbered to 25 graded a 9.5 for the card and a 10 autograph by Beckett was on eBay for $14,999. A Jimenez 2017 Bowman Chrome superfractor relic 1/1 and graded a 9 by Beckett had a $10,000 price tag on eBay.

Blest doesn't pay too much attention to single card sales prices but working at Dave & Adam's Card

World, he sees it in the unopened boxes in inventory for older years that have players such as Guerrero and Jimenez.

"We just sold a box of 2016 Bowman Chrome on the site for $540, which is just crazy if you think of the original price points on those boxes," said Blest, who figures a box that year started out at about $65-$70. "You can tell the single card sales that are driving those prices."

Over the years, Blest has watched as some collectors only go after MLB-licensed products that are the official card of the player in his team uniform.

"Other collectors probably don't care, as long as the name's on the card and his image is there or maybe there's an auto, that's good enough for them," Blest said.

"I would say everybody gets a little bit more excited about the officially-licensed stuff, the MLB-licensed trading cards from Topps and Panini as well. I know over the last couple of years that Elite Extra Edition has a really in-depth list of prospects, so you'll find content in there as well."

The card companies are catering to the big-time collectors by continuing to put out product of the prospects.

"For the last few years, Topps and the Bowman brands have products that are geared toward the prospects, so when you have those international signees or the Bowman Draft products, those guys are in there almost right away," Blest said. "You have Bowman Chrome from 2016 that has Vlad Guerrero autographed content. They've been on the radar for those guys for a while now. Obviously, you can't have a Guerrero rookie card or things of that nature until he actually plays, but they're obviously really good now of following the career paths of these guys and anticipating when they're going to be called up and working them into their products to take advantage it."

Blest is expecting when 2019 Bowman Chrome is released in mid-April it will be a sought-after product with Guerrero, Jimenez and other top prospects. When 2018 Bowman Draft came out it did really well, noted Blest.

"It gets better every year," Blest said. "These guys are marketed more and more by MLB. Most of the MLB analysts now are aware of these players that are featured on MLB Network. Everyone has their top prospect list and I think that's created more awareness for these young players at an early stage in their careers and I would expect that to continue. It will only get bigger." ♦

Celebrating the past

Cincinnati Reds Hall of Fame and Museum is a home run

Baseball, more than any sport, is a game of history, and there are only a handful of teams that can claim the heritage that equals that of the Cincinnati Reds. The Cubs, Yankees, Red Sox, Tigers, and Cardinals are the ones that come to my mind as being mentioned in the same breath.

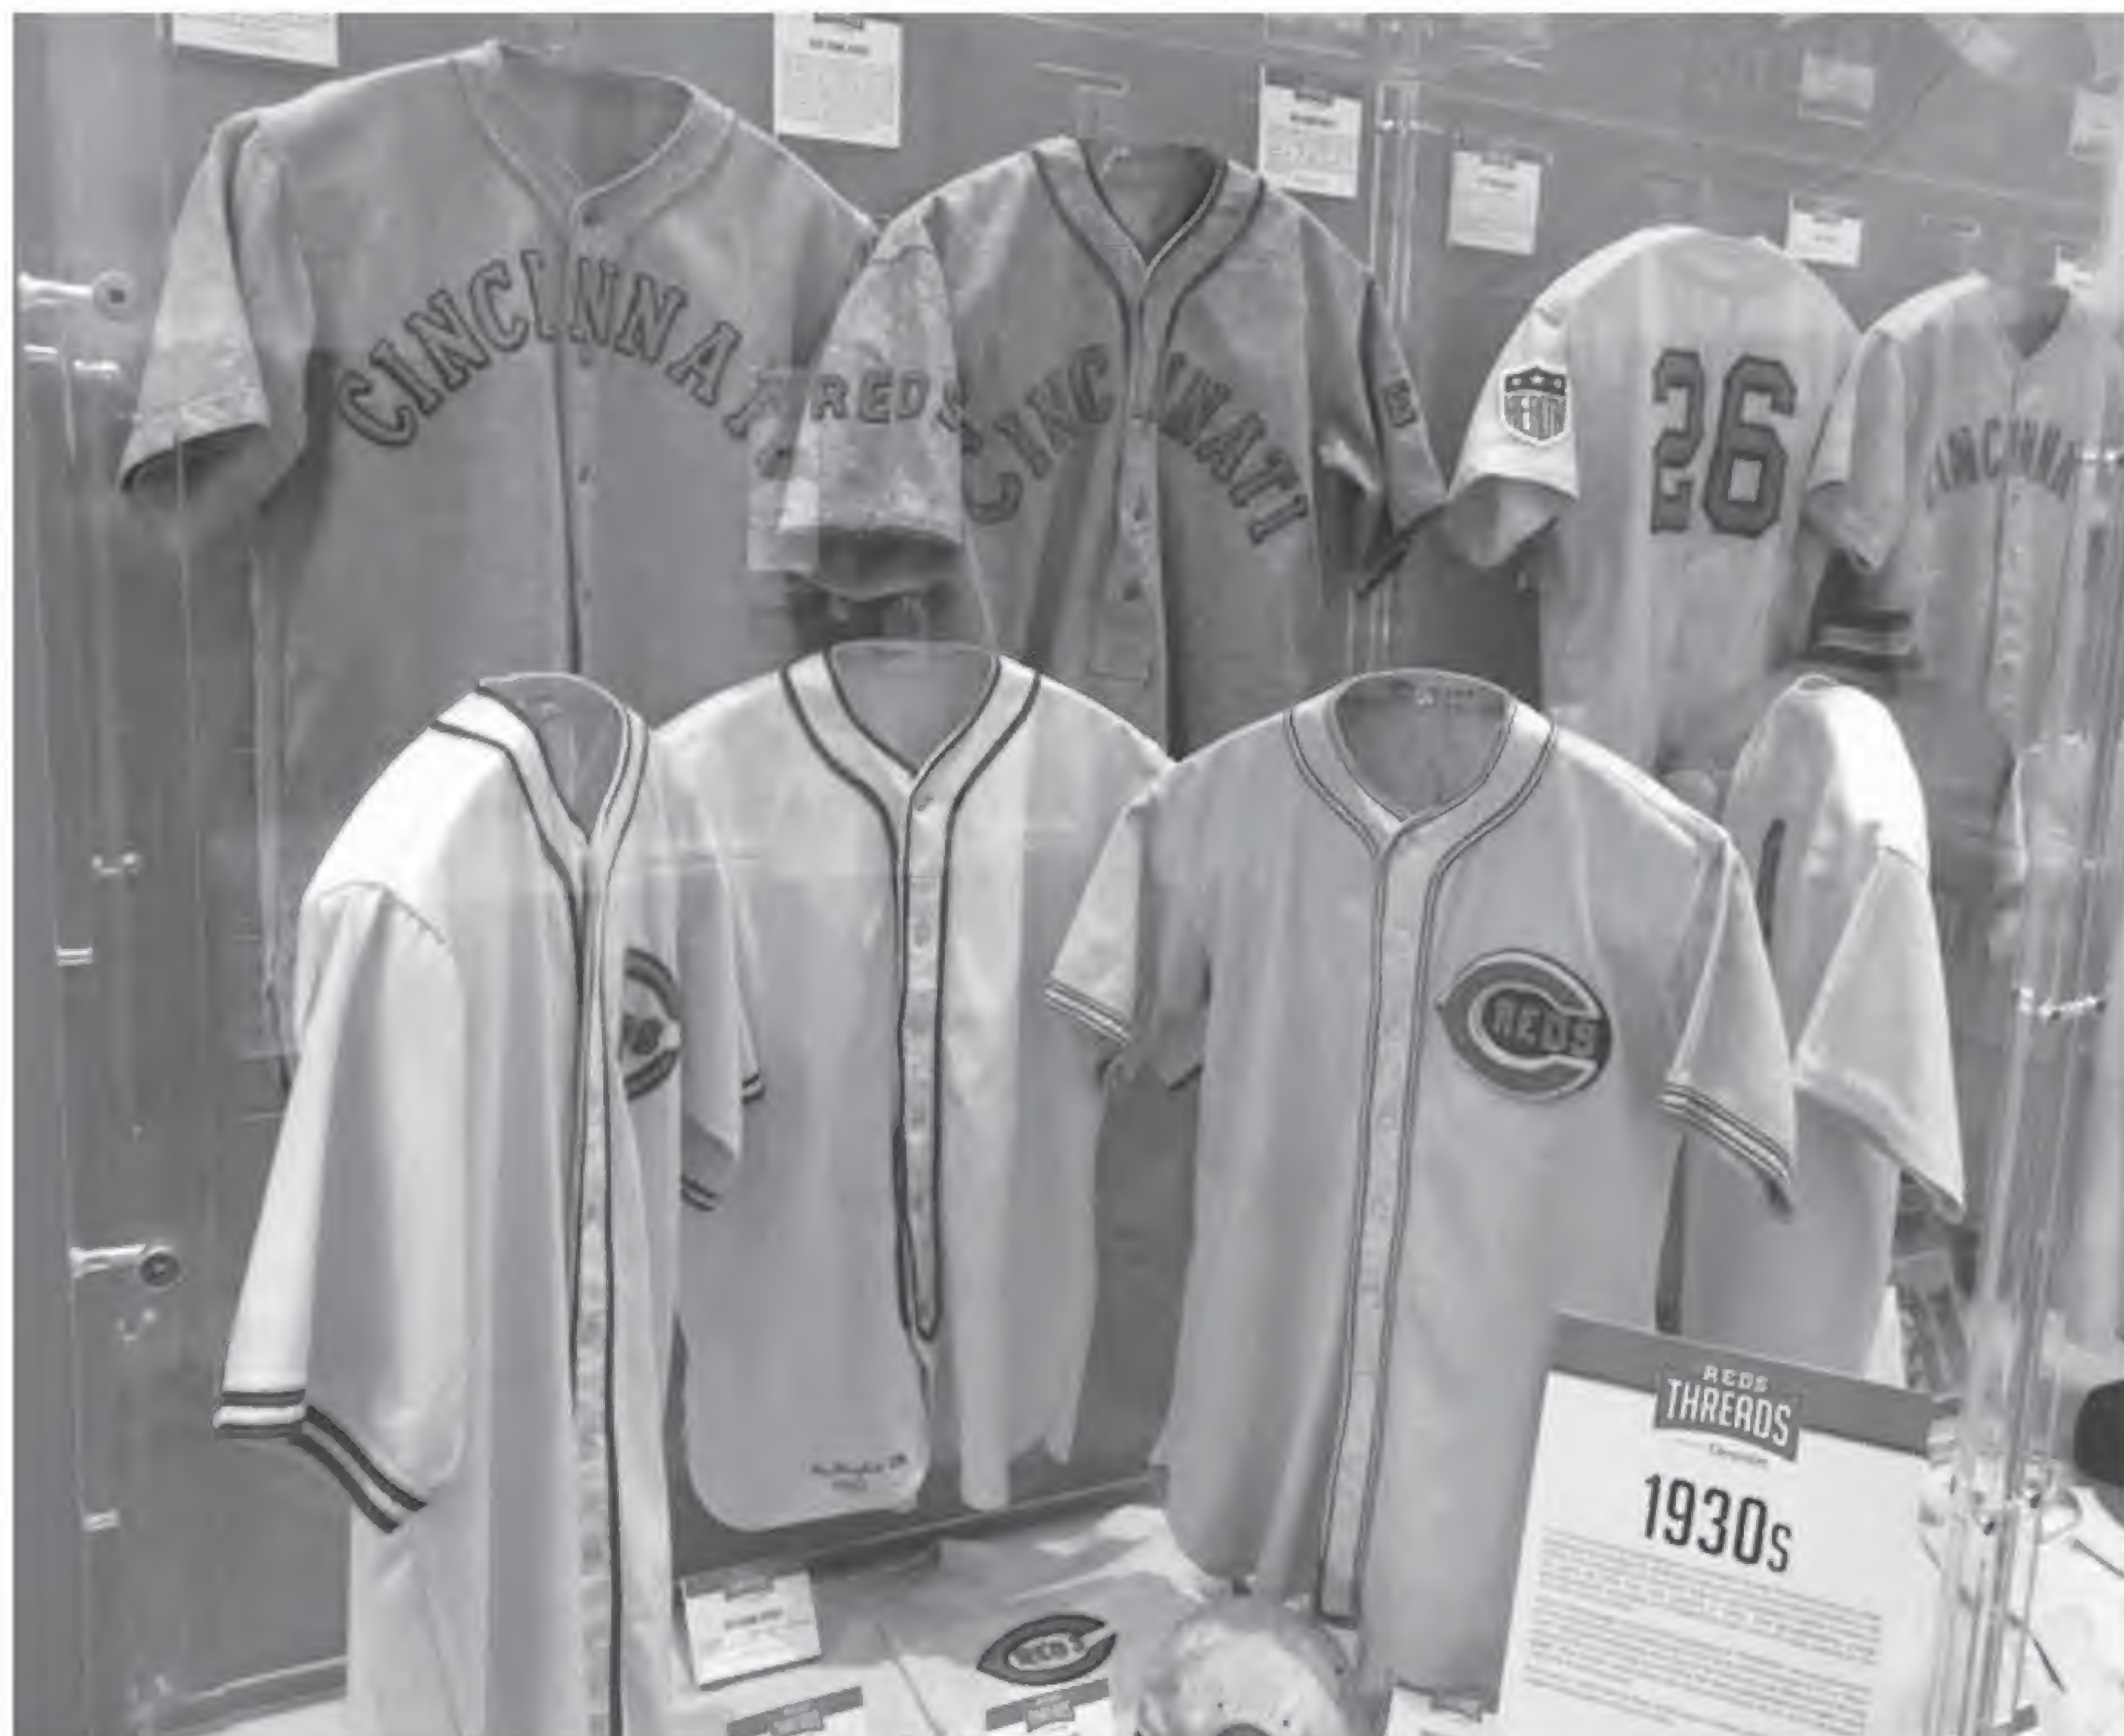

My reason for giving these teams the nod? They have all been playing this great game for the longest period of time in the same cities where they started. Their stadiums, though not all of them, the same ones that they originally started with, have remained very close by when they moved into a new one. Two of them play in parks over 100 years old, Fenway and Wrigley. You have many of the greatest players and teams over the years, and in some cases, it was years of frustration that solidified their fan bases.

One thing that the Reds have embraced in celebrating their past is The Cincinnati Reds Hall of Fame and Museum, which is adjacent to the Great American Ball Park. It offers two floors with over 15,000 square feet of exhibit space and for historical perspective, it sits on the site that was once left field in Riverfront Stadium. It has been said by some that it is the second best baseball museum, next to the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum in Cooperstown.

When I asked the Reds' Chris Eckes, operations manager and chief curator of the museum that question, he laughed, then said, "I've been told that some people in St. Louis might like to argue with you about that."

Nothing like a little National League Central Division rivalry coming into play, even amongst the team's museums.

When I visited the museum during the 2018 baseball season, their exhibit was "Reds Threads," a study of the uniforms worn by the team since its start in 1869 as The Red Stockings, all the way up through what they were wearing for the 2018 season. Over 120 Reds uniform items were on display in cases throughout the main floor.

There were also jerseys from 26 major league teams past and present, on display as well throughout the building, which tied into the exhibit.

Included were the teams that played against the two-time World Champion "Big Red Machine" back in the 1970s, from both the American and National Leagues. If you are a collector or student of uniforms, it was an exhibit well worth seeing.

"This is one of the largest uniform exhibits ever assembled and displayed for the public to see," Eckes said. He was quick to point out that Lieutenant Colonel (Ret.) Frank Grob, considered by many as the foremost authenticator and collector of major league uniforms, was instrumental in helping put it all together. "Several of the pieces came from his private collection." They also collaborated with the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown to help make it happen.

When you first walked in, the exhibit started with a replica uniform of the Cincinnati Red Stockings, the first all professional baseball team from 1869. Why a replica, you ask? Up until this point in time, no original has ever turned up, or is known to exist. I asked Eckes what if he one day got a call from someone who thought they might have one?

"We would love to talk with them," he said. He pointed out that they don't purchase items and what they have on exhibit have come straight from the Reds, been donated, or are on loan. I asked if a benefactor might factor into the equation if such a find was ever made, and he said “That could be a possibility.”

The Reds became a charter member of the National League when it was formed in 1876. I always thought the Reds were the oldest and longest running team in the majors. What I didn’t know, and found out on my trip to Cincinnati, was that the Reds were expelled from the National League in October 1880, due in part to their renting out their ballpark on Sundays, and for refusing to stop selling beer at their ballgames. A month later they became a founding member of the American Association at a meeting in the Gibson Hotel in Cincinnati. It would be in late 1889 before they were granted readmission to the National League. How ironic this seems today when you look at the large roll that beer sales and advertising play into the budgets of major league teams, and that every team now plays on Sundays.

The exhibit went into the history of major league uniforms over the years, including the changing of materials. They even had on display a uniform swatch book from 1951 that was used by teams to pick out the material they wanted to use from the McGregor/Goldsmith Sporting Goods Company. From wool flannel in the early years, to the colorful double knits of the 1970s, to the blends of today’s more traditional looking uniforms, the changes over the years were discussed and displayed. There were display cases with the different uniforms used by the Reds for each decade from the 1920s going forward up until what they wore last season.

Here are things from the exhibits that stood out to me:

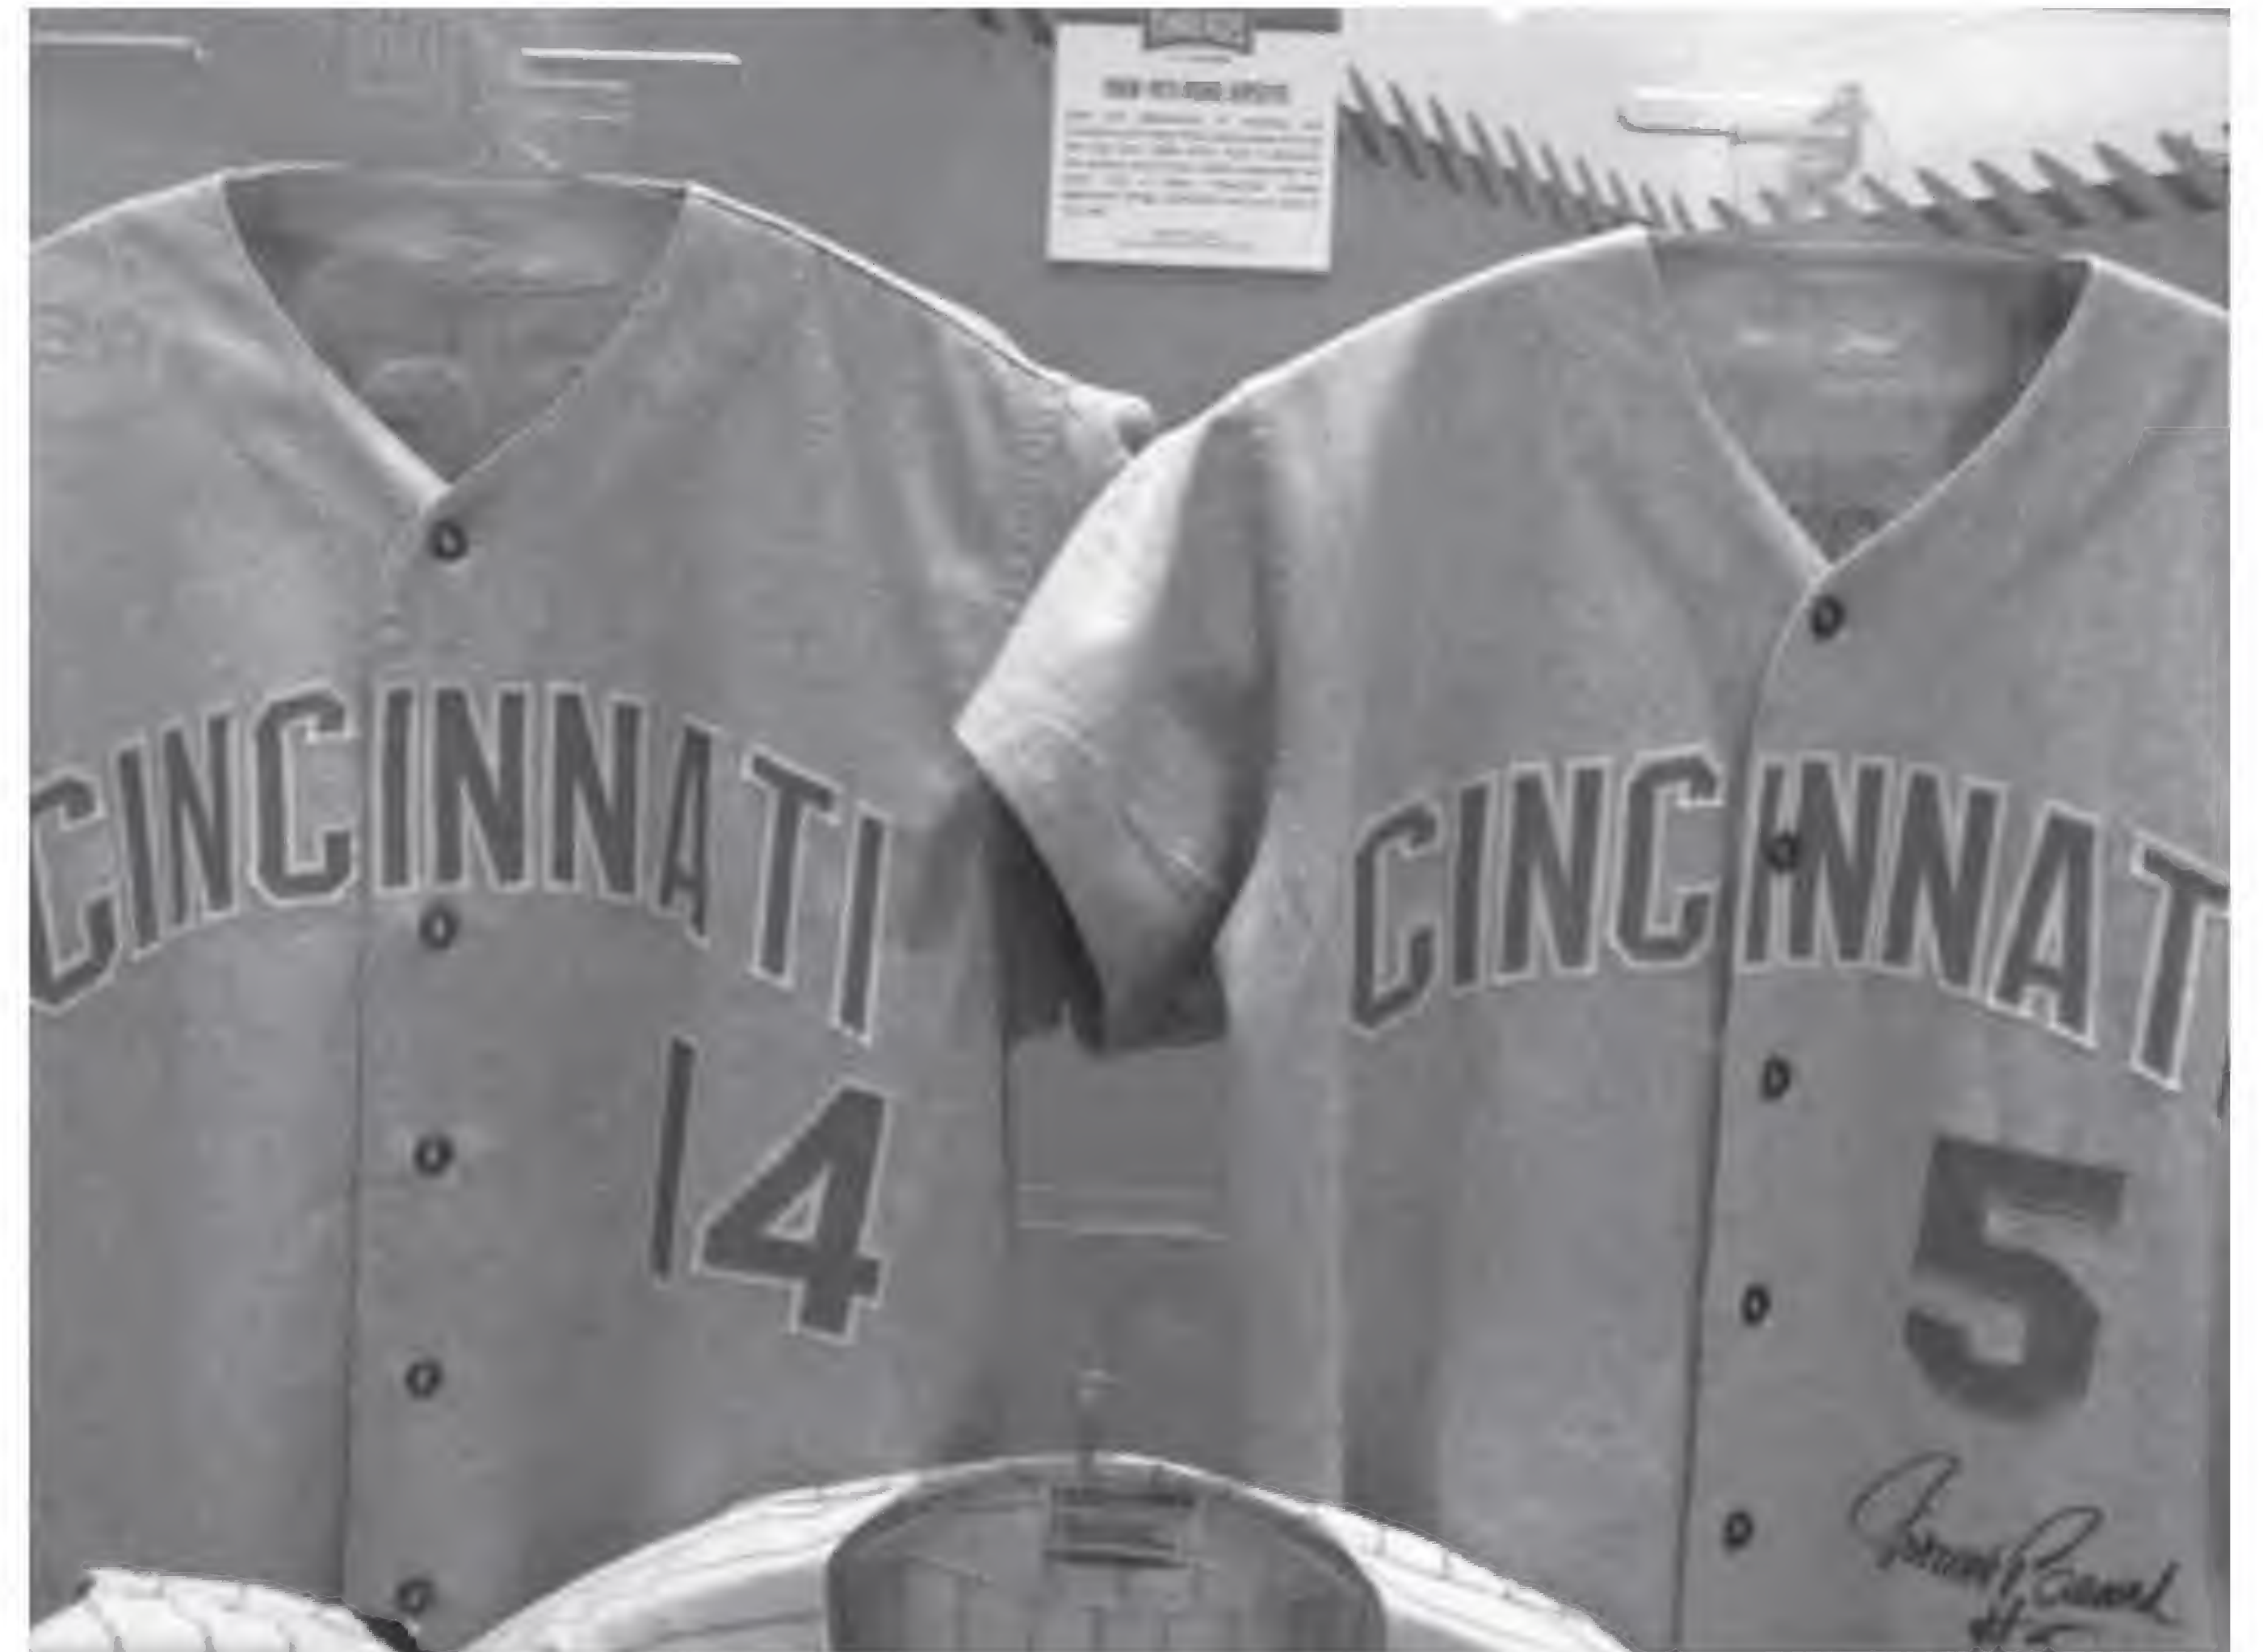

A case with unique and unusual uniform offerings starting in 1926 and made by the Goldsmith Company. Included were a 1967 Reds home jersey, a 1960 Pittsburgh Pirates away jersey, a 1934 Chicago White Sox home jersey, a 1947 Brooklyn Dodgers away jersey (Jackie Robinson’s rookie year), and a Cleveland Indians away jersey from the 1959 season. All these jerseys were actually made in the city of Cincinnati.

The oldest authentic piece on display was a 1920s Reds home cap from Chuck Dressen, on loan from the National Baseball Hall of Fame. He played in the infield from 1925-1931.

I liked the white batting helmet worn by Johnny Bench in 1983, including a picture of him with it on. Chances are, unless you are a long time die hard Reds fan, you have not seen this before, as it was used only in spring training that year down in Tampa, Florida. The decision was made to not use them in the regular season. Also on display was a black batting helmet that was worn by catcher Jason LaRue, listed as a “catchers’ helmet.” He was a Red from 1999 to 2006. His 2002 Fleer Traditions baseball card is a great picture of him wearing this.

There was a display box featuring all the jerseys worn by the Reds during the 2017 season. In it were 15 different ones; everything from your everyday home and away shirts, to one for Jackie Robinson Day with the number 42, some throwbacks, a Father’s Day one, and two different military appreciation jerseys in camo, plus a Hispanic one with ‘Los Rojos’ across the front. Of course some were done to honor others, yet all were done with some marketing in mind as well. Just like going to a hockey game, you see more and more baseball fans showing up with their favorite team and player jerseys on, and it is a great trend. At the stadium the Reds have a program for kids called “Reds Heads” that includes them getting their own jersey when they join. I think this is all great for the growth of the game.

As I mentioned earlier, there was a display case of uniforms from different teams that played against “The Big Red Machine” in the 1970s. As you can imagine, there was quite a bit of polyester in that one.

There were gray away game jerseys from both Pete Rose and Johnny Bench from the flannel era. Here you found two of baseball’s all-time greats and their classic-looking threads. Hey, it doesn’t get much better than that. I always thought those Reds gray jerseys were a classic look.

Speaking of Rose, Cincinnati’s native son is not banned from the Reds Hall of Fame and Museum, as he is prominently on display throughout. There is a wall stretching three floors, covered with 4,256 baseballs, representing each of his record major league hits. It is in the south end of the building and you can look out the window and see a rose garden that marks the spot where his record breaking hit to pass Ty Cobb landed in what was left of center field in Riverfront Stadium. In this Hall of Fame he has a plaque, joining all the other Reds honorees. He hangs right above his longtime teammate, Joe Barry Larkin's jersey from the 2013 season.

Morgan, considered by many as the best second baseman of all time.

I spied a jersey of Ted Kluszewski, the popular slugging first baseman who played for the Reds in the 1950s. Kids from my era remember him for his huge arms that he showed off by having his sleeves cut off up to his shoulders. This one here was altered just as I remembered. He said he did it so as not to rip his jerseys when he swung. Leo Durocher once remarked, "He was so strong that I didn't think he was human."

Now I'm stepping inside Great American Ball Park for this one, but no trip to Cincinnati is complete without checking out the two frescoed murals in the stadium. One is of the 1869 Red Stockings and the other is of the eight everyday starters of the '75-'76 "Big Red Machine." The famous Roebling Bridge is in the background of both. It is beautiful artwork that embraces the town's love and history of baseball, located in the main entrance to the stadium, directly behind home plate.

Last thing: It was great to see lots of school groups taking in the exhibit, with little kids sitting spellbound as they listened to their tour guides. Afterwards, they were going next door to the afternoon game. Hats off to the Reds and the museum for putting together this great program.

Make a trip to Cincinnati and check out the Reds Hall of Fame and Museum before you take in a game at Great American Ball Park. I guarantee that you will enjoy it. ♦

Lots of vintage

Pre-War standouts headline Memory Lane's Spring Break Rarities Auction

A T206 Old Mill Ty Cobb PSA 8, a near set of the hobby's "monster" and a rarely offered PSA 9 1939 Play Ball Ted Williams rookie card will lead off Memory Lane's Spring Break Rarities catalog when bidding opens. That trio of lots is just the start of a 1,000-item auction that has everything from rare Babe Ruth cards to Tom Brady rookies.

Bidding opened March 16 and closes April 6.

The T206 Cobb is the highest graded example that features the Old Mill Cigarettes ad on the back. Prices for non-rare backed Cobbs have increased by more than 400 percent in recent years with two eights having sold last summer for six-figure prices. Bidding on the Old Mill Cobb opened at a modest $15,000.

The auction also includes a near set of 470 graded T206 cards from the collection of the late Jim Haas, who spent more than four decades piecing it together as well as dozens of other graded cards from the hobby's most popular pre-War set.

The PSA 9 1939 Play Ball Williams is a condition rarity. Only 12 exist (one higher) and just three examples have been offered at auction over the last nine years with the last example bringing $240,000. Bidding for the Memory Lane offering opened at $50,000.

Several uncommon Ruth cards can also be found near the beginning of the catalog including some that stand at or near the top of the population reports for condition. There is a 1921 Oxford Confectionery graded PSA 5.5 (only one higher); a 1921 American Caramel with Ruth's nickname in quotes (PSA 3.5); a 1928 Yuengling's rated 5 (the highest PSA example) and a PSA 2 1933 Uncle Jack's Candy (only 14 graded examples exist).

A Boston Americans team set of scarce 1903 E107 Breisch-Williams cards will be offered card-by-card, including Cy Young. The remainder of the legendary complete set owned by collector Chris Sullivan sold at auction seven years ago.

Other notable pre-1950s card offerings will include a set of 1911 T201 Mecca Double Folders, a 1933 DeLong set break with 23 of 24 cards available including a PSA 5 Lou Gehrig; a high-grade 1948 Bowman set break with what's become a hot market for vintage icons. There are a large number of vintage Mickey Mantle cards, large runs of graded 1950s cards and a major collection of high-grade rookies featuring Brady, whose earliest cardboard has been the topic of countless news stories in recent weeks.

Set collectors will have several options to chase. The auction will feature the fourth best 1959 Fleer Ted Williams set on PSA's Set Registry, the eighth best 1955 Bowman football set with all cards rated 8 or 9, a high-grade 1961 Topps

Baseball set, a high-grade near complete set of 1966-67 Topps USA Test Hockey, a 1986-87 Fleer complete set (all PSA 8) and numerous other sets and near sets.

The auction includes a significant run of vintage unopened material including a 1959 Fleer Ted Williams box, a 1975 Topps Mini Baseball box, a 1977 Topps cello box, a 1977 Topps Football cello box and a 1977 Topps Mexican Football box. Non-sport unopened includes 1960s More of the Monkees and Donruss Combat.

Memorabilia collectors will find several desirable signed checks including the earliest Hall of Fame inductees: Ruth, Mathewson, Cobb, Wagner and Johnson. The auction also has several other Ruth autographs including a single-signed ball. There are autographed photos of Cobb and Gehrig and a Ruth/Gehrig dual cut.

Photo collectors will find two dozen lots featuring Type 1 images including several of Ruth taken by the legendary George Grantham Bain.

To request a physical copy of the catalog and/or register for bidding, contact Memory Lane at www.memorylaneinc.com or by calling 877-606-5263. ♦

45 PSA 8s, several high quality 1915 Cracker Jack cards, several rare 19th century Old Judge cards and a scarce 1948 Leaf Satchel Paige (PSA 4.5).

A collection of Willie Mays cards considered the best in the world will be broken up and sold in the auction including many of the best known particular examples for some of the rarest Mays cards ever issued.

High-grade rookie cards of Roberto Clemente (PSA 8), Hank Aaron (PSA 8 and 7.5), Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (PSA 9), Oscar Robertson (PSA 8), Wayne Gretzky (OPC PSA 8) and dozens of others are expected to attract bidders in

National Hockey
Card Day has

tradition for many

When National Hockey Card Day first got its start the future of the event was unknown. Since that time, it's become a day on the calendar that families circle.

"Daddy! It's National Hockey Card Day!" exclaimed Tom Poray's two young daughters on the morning of February 23. Such youthful exuberance would normally be reserved for a holiday like Christmas or Halloween. Yet since 2009 in Canada and 2012 in the United States, Upper Deck's National Hockey Card Day has slowly and steadily transformed into an event that families look forward to each year.

Throughout the day, anyone who visited a participating card shop in Canada or the U.S. was given a free, five-card pack of hockey cards. Like every year, the Canadian and American sets differ, and each set has 16 cards. Cards 1-15 were available in the free foil packs, while the last card was given to a customer if they made a $10 purchase. This year, the bonus cards were of John Tavares in the Canadian set and Alexander Ovechkin in the American set.

Fans in both countries could also hope to pull an insert or autographed card. Some big box stores, such as Toys R Us in Canada and Dick's Sporting Goods in several eastern U.S. states, also gave away perforated, nine-card sheets of hockey cards.

Poray, who is from Guelph, Ontario, looks forward to National Hockey Card Day each year, as do his two daughters, ages 7 and 5. This year, he took them to four different shops so that they could get enough packs to each build a set.

"To me, this is phenomenal," he said. "This isn't something that I'm pushing on my girls," Poray said. "It's nice to see that level of enthusiasm not directed at a video game or a screen."

In 2016, Poray and fellow collector David Panopoulos started the National Hockey Card Day Trade Group on Facebook as a place where hockey card collectors could help each other finish their sets. The group currently has around 200 members. It has also become a place for Canadians and Americans to trade complete sets with each other, as many American collectors want to also have the Canadian set, and vice versa.

"We wanted to create a group that wasn't about buying or selling," Poray said. "It was created for people to share their experiences. Really, it was about having fun, trading and sharing the day."

Poray's experience, in making National Hockey Card Day into a family day, is not unique. Laura Lanteigne, of Brantford, Ontario, has made it an annual family outing for seven years now. She, her husband, son and daughter usually start the morning with breakfast at Tim Horton's, then visit six or so stores for free hockey cards, followed by lunch, then going home and open their packs.

"We usually end up spending more money than we intend, because my husband and son like to buy sets when they are at the store," she said. "But that's our tradition. We make a whole day of it."

Stateside, Paul Stratmeyer of Sioux Falls, North Dakota doesn't have the luxury of going to many different stores for free hockey cards.

"We have two hobby stores in Sioux Falls, and only Triple Play Sports Cards was participating in (National) Hockey Card Day this year," he said.

Still, National Hockey Card Day has become an annual event for Stratmeyer and his two sons, ages 19 and 14. The three have collected baseball and football cards for over a decade, and began collecting hockey cards about five years ago, after they started watching their local junior team, the Sioux Falls Stampede. They also collect cards of former Stampede players who have made it to the NHL, such as Thomas Vanek and T.J. Oshie. In 2016, Stratmeyer and his sons made it a point to go to shops on National Hockey Card Day and get their free packs.

"It's nice to get something unique, something different that you can't normally buy," he said. "My kids like working on the set together."

"Initially, National Hockey Card Day was designed as a way to encourage fans to visit shops," said Chris Carlin, senior manager of Customer Experience at Upper Deck. “The family nature of the program is one that has morphed over the years, and one that we are certainly embracing when families make their annual road trip to shops.”

For example, one year Upper Deck held a contest asking families to share their pictures from National Hockey Card Day, and Lanteigne sent in a photo.

“My son Jake won, and Upper Deck sent him some game-worn jersey cards,” she said. “Every year now, Jake is like ‘Mom, take my picture here! Take my picture here!’ He was probably two years old then, and is almost seven now, so the fact that he even remembers that is pretty cool.”

National Hockey Card Day isn’t just about the cards anymore. Sure, the promise of free cards lures both hardcore and casual collectors out, encouraging them to visit one or several stores that day, trade with each other, and try and build a set. Now, it’s about building memories, too.

“It’s nice to see my girls go out and interact, and ask the store owners for cards,” Poray said. “They love it. It’s like a different version of Halloween.”

“One thing I like about it is that it interests my husband and my son,” Lanteigne said. “It’s cross-generational. It’s just nice to spend the whole day with my family, because time just goes by so fast. It gives us another reason to spend time together, which is our favorite thing to do.” ♦

Most lots in Clean Sweep auction retail for $500 or less

Nearly all the auction items in the current Clean Sweep auction have a retail value of $500 or less and low minimum bids.

The auction takes place over two days, April 10-11.

Day one is all about baseball autographs, beginning with autographed cards, including a run of slabbed 1964 Topps Giants, 1978 Grand Slam HOFers/scarcities and a strong run of signed Yellow HOF Plaques.

The auction continues with a large selection of signed 8x10 photos, with emphasis on both HOFers and scarcities. There are some quality 3x5s and cut signatures, including a vintage Roy Campanella. Also available are full team signed sheets from the 1960s, signed equipment including a Sandy Koufax Cooperstown Collection jersey, many better signed cachets, including group lots and much more.

Collectors of signed vintage magazines and programs should love this auction, as there is a fresh run of high quality programs signed by Hank Aaron, Joe DiMaggio, Willie Mays, Casey Stengel and Ted Williams among many others.

Single signed baseball collectors will have hundreds of lots to peruse, many including very tough to find deceased players, a large run of HOF singles and many baseballs with desirable inscriptions. There are many group lots of single signed balls at the end of this section.

Team and multi-signed balls close out day one. These go back to the 1930s, and offer a very eclectic mix of key teams, All Star Game balls and some top condition team balls.

Day two starts with baseball cards. These span over 100 years. Highlights include a run of 1947-1966 Exhibits with many scarcities, four 1950 Drakes slabbed cards, many interesting better oddball items from the 1960s and the 1970s, clean 1960s star cards and common lots and also some complete sets. There is a selection of 1964 Stand Ups with a Mickey Mantle and Carl Yastrzemski, 1964 Topps Venezuela cards with HOFers and quality unopened packs and boxes from the mid-1970s through the mid-1980s in this section.

Basketball comes next, including many signed items from classic HOF players, a small offering of cards and many quality publications going back to the 1940s. Boxing collectors will see some nicer Ali signed items and a mix of autographs and memorabilia.

Football is always a big part of these auctions. The current auction has a run of uncommon football publications going back to the 1940s, many signed items and a nice selection of clean single cards, lots and sets from the 1950s through the 1980s.

Hockey collectors will have many nice contemporary signed items from key HOFers available, as well as publication lots back to the 1930s and clean cards going back to the 1950s with some better 1980s wax.

Baseball memorabilia closes out the auction. One of Clean Sweep's best offerings, it begins with a wide range of baseball publications, including many scarce programs and Baseball Magazines from 1909-1910. There is a big run of antique bats and Clean Sweep's largest offering ever of vintage bobbin head dolls. There are pennant lots, pin lots and many more interesting and unusual memorabilia items.

Rich Wolfin of Woodcliff Lake, New Jersey, has been collecting coin-operated machines for some 35 years. He has purchased, traded, restored, and collected machines, many of which came from amusement park arcades. Wolfin contacted me recently to get information on Exhibit cards as described in my Sports Collectors Digest articles from October 2017.

Wolfin wrote: "I get calls about a wide array of antique coin operated machines from all over the country. Recently, I was contacted by a couple in their 80s in the New York area where I live. The husband is the son of the late owner/operator of Harry's Arcade which was on the boardwalk in Coney Island from the 1920s thru the 1950s. Many of the old time operator/owners of these arcades would often keep some machines they liked or were simply pulling out of the arcade rotation because they were being replaced by machines that took in more money. That is the case with the card machines I purchased.

"When I opened up the two machines, I was flabbergasted to discover they contained over 400 cards of cowboys, movie stars, boxers and I'm happy to say, baseball players. They are new/old stock having not been touched since they were placed in the Exhibit Supply arcade machines in 1953 or 1954, some 65 years ago."

Exciting time capsule

I was equally excited to speak to Wolfin about his find. Finding cards still in an arcade machine, in and of itself, is not surprising. Arcade operators would certainly take the money out of their machines, but there wasn't much point in taking product out. The cards and the machine went together. Arcade cards cost the vendors as little as $3.85 for 1,000 cards. The Exhibit Supply Company (ESCO) shipped machines to buyers already stocked with cards. I have talked with collectors who acquired machines years ago with cards still in them.

While finding cards in a machine was not that unusual, it is unusual that these particular machines sat for 65 years before someone peeked inside. It was like a time capsule of untouched cardboard. The find included two Mantles, two Mayses, Yankees and Dodgers team cards, and several other HOFers. The Mantle card is the version of him from the waist up with the "c" and "k" in his facsimile signature joined.

In the first machine, 110 baseball cards were paired with cowboys and movie stars, including Gene Autry, Hopalong Cassidy, Ronald Reagan and John Wayne.

The second machine's front paper display piece, printed in black and white, showed baseball and football cards including Joe DiMaggio and Chuck Bednarik checklists for sets from 1950.

As Wolfin recalls, there were no football players in the machine, but boxers instead, along with more movie stars and cowboys. The boxing cards consisted of 44 cards with 20 different boxers including Joe Louis, Sugar Ray Robinson, Billy Conn, Rocky Graziano, Jake LaMotta, Willie Pep and Johnny Bratton. The two machines contained 274 movie stars and cowboys, likely from two sets – Salutation Cowboys and Movie Stars. From Wolfin's experience with arcade operators, they might not get around to updating advertising pieces on the fronts of the machines. The second machine, minus the cards inside, has been sold.

The back story and condition

You can tell if an Exhibit card is authentic rather than a reprint by looking at the back of the card. Reprints are usually on white or dark gray stock. (Some reprints were actually printed by ESCO on white stock in the 1970s.) Authentic cards are on light gray/tan stock (you might describe as sepia toned) and show some edge discoloration from exposure to sunlight and handling. Wolfin's cards have very light gray/tan backs but show no discoloration from sunlight or handling. They have been sitting in dark machines for most of their 65 years of existence. They are spotless with square corners.

ESCO's cardboard stock was about as cheap as you could get, but the cards produced were thick so that they would work in the machines and they seem to hold up well. Also the border-less Exhibit cards are cut well and you don't see miscuts. Nonetheless, Exhibit cards are not like Upper Deck cards right out of the box with gloss and razor-sharp edges. Some cards have minor corner fuzziness. There was some moisture damage to some of the non-sport cards in the second machine. It will be interesting to see what grades result from submitting some of the key cards. I have been collecting exhibit cards for years and, taken as a whole, these are the nicest cards I have seen.

Machine memories

Wolfin has fond memories of arcade machines and amusement parks.

He said, "My father was in the machine shop business and provided replacement parts for coin-operated machines to distributors in New York City from the 1950s thru the 1980s. Some 60 such distributors operated on and around 10th Avenue in New York City from the 1920s thru the 1980s."

As a little boy, Wolfin would often go along with his dad when he delivered spare parts to the distributors. Wolfin would get a few nickels and play the machines. Although he owns

The cards, as well as the baseball and football checklists on one machine front are from 1950, although the cards inside were not.

SPORTSADDRESSLISTS.COM
NEW AND UPDATED SPORTS ADDRESS LISTS FOR 2019

For over twenty four years I've been researching and selling the best and most accurate sports address lists available and there is one winner: YOU!
I'd like to invite everyone to stop by my website at www.sportsaddresslists.com to see the lineup of great sports address lists for 2019, each one a proven winner.

|--|---|
| 1) BASEBALL ADDRESS LIST (there are over 3,950 new and updated addresses for 2019)The most accurate baseball address list available and plenty of new information never included before. If you collect baseball autographs through the mail this is the address list you need. Please go to my website to learn about all the different update types, new additions to the list for 2019 and other areas never included in address lists before. 2) FOOTBALL ADDRESS LIST 3) HOCKEY ADDRESS LIST 4) BASKETBALL ADDRESS LIST 5) MEN AND WOMEN OF DISTINCTION ADDRESS LIST | 6) AUTO RACING ADDRESS LIST (back for 2019) 7) GOLF ADDRESS LIST (back for 2019) 8) MINOR LEAGUE BALLPLAYERS ADDRESS LIST 9) OLYMPIANS ADDRESS LIST |

PLUS, when you order any of the address lists, and include your email address, you will receive address update emails several times a year, usually, in March, June and September. Also, emails letting you know about players who have recently started to charge a through the mail signing and players that can no longer sign due to health reasons.

It is a fact that athletes move very frequently and it's important to have an address list researcher working for you to keep track of the most current addresses. I promise to do that for you when you purchase my address lists.

Who do these email address updates help? YOU!

Because you won't be wasting postage sending requests to outdated addresses.

Payments accepted by credit card and PayPal through the website or check & money order (payable to Harvey Meiselman).

For more information on all of the great sports address lists, please visit my website at:

a successful Velcro product distribution business with his brother, Wolfin has always had a keen interest in collecting old arcade machines which he buys and sometimes sells through his website: www.SlotsEtc.com. He has not been a card collector, but has significant experience with all antique coin-operated machines, and is a quick learner. He intends to sell the Exhibit cards and the remaining machine and is considering his options for doing so. Wolfin can be reached at antiquemachines@aol.com.

Wolfin's listing and Vrechek's assumptions

As a bonus, for those of us who have scratched our heads as to how ESCO produced cards, Wolfin prepared a careful listing of the cards found in each machine.

It has been my position that ESCO designed cards periodically and then reused those designs each time they printed a sheet of cards. ESCO might change the printing notations on newly-designed cards, but they wouldn't necessarily bother changing notations on cards designed in prior years. Therefore, I felt that Exhibit cards printed in one year would include a variety of printing notations such as MADE IN USA, Made in USA and Printed in USA. Salutation Exhibit cards and cards with the notation "An Exhibit Card” would also be printed on the same sheet of usually 32 cards.

EXHIBIT CARD FIND from page 45

While I am easily convinced of the correctness of my own assumptions, Wolfin’s find confirmed my theory. The baseball cards found in Wolfin’s Exhibit Supply card dispensing machine had printing notations consistent with those used in the prior decade or so. I counted six different styles.

There were 62 different player cards among the 110 baseball cards in the machine. There were three copies of some cards and just one of others. Two sheets of 32 cards were likely printed and then sold in bricks of (about) 500 or 1,000. If ESCO printed 64 cards 16 times it would result in 1,024 cards. The cards were then shuffled to try to produce a random order, so that collectors could put in 64 cents and would still not get a complete set of cards. I found that the distribution of 64 players among 110 cards using random number tables came pretty close to what Wolfin found in the machine which was 0 cards of 2 players, 1 card of 31 players, 2 cards of 15 players, 3 cards of 15 players, and 4 cards of one player.

Who was in the box

The style and printing information on the 62 players was all over the map. The following list shows the players found and the type of printing information on their cards. All cards were sepia-toned and the printing information was in the lower right corner of the card.

Salutation Exhibits with layouts designed in 1946 or 1947 with MADE IN U.S.A. 9/16” long – 3 cards: Elliott, Feller and Pafko Layouts designed in 1947 with MADE IN U.S.A. 1/2” long – 4 cards: DiMaggio, Ennis, Majeski and Slaughter. There is also a card of Walker Cooper with no printing. Cooper was first produced in 1947 with MADE IN U.S.A., but subsequent versions were cropped differently and the printing seems to have been lopped off.

Layouts designed in 1948 with MADE IN U.S.A. 5/8” long – 6 cards: Evers, Kell, Reese, J. Robinson, Spahn and Torgeson Layouts designed in 1949 with MADE IN U.S.A. 8 or 5/8” long and “AN EXHIBIT CARD” printed in the lower left corner – 8 cards: Bearden, Berra, Branca, Brecheen, Doby, Mitchell, Rizzuto and Sain

Layouts designed in 1950 with MADE IN U.S.A. 7/16" long – 12 cards: Ashburn, Campanella, Evans, Hatton, Hegan, Kellner, Kinder, Newcombe, Raschi, Roe, Sauer and Westlake Layouts designed in 1951, 1952 or 1953 with Made in U.S.A. (lower case) 1/2" long – all remaining 28 cards: Blackwell, Carrasquel, Church, Dark, Dropo, Easter, Fain, Goodman, Groth, Irvin, Jethroe, Konstanty, Lemon, Lockman, Lopat, Lowery (sic), Maglie, Mantle, Marion, Mays, McDougald, Minoso, E. Robinson, Sisler, Vernon, Wertz, 1952 Dodgers team and 1952 Yankees team.

(FROM TOP TO BOTTOM) Six different print styles on cards out of the same machine: 1) Salutation exhibit of Feller; 2) Ennis from 1947 with "MADE IN U.S.A." 1/2" long; 3) Reese's card from 1948 with "MADE IN U.S.A." 5/8" long and the ball partially visible; 4) Rizzuto from 1949 with "MADE IN U.S.A." and "AN EXHIBIT CARD" printed in the lower left corner; 5) Campanella from 1950 with "MADE IN U.S.A." 7/16" long; 6) Maglie with "Made in U.S.A." (lower case) 1/2" long.

A few exhibits are found with or without "burnt bottoms," where it looks like ESCO tried to alter or partially delete the printing information. Wolfin's find includes Campanella, Easter and Majeski with this feature. The Reese card is a variation with the ball that he is fielding partially visible.

Who wasn't there?

I took a look at my own checklist for cards designed in 1951, 1952 and 1953 to see which two cards on the 64-card print run were not found in Wolfin's machine. The only missing player which fit the design was Ed Stanky. The final missing card must have been designed prior to 1951. Stan Musial and Ted Williams cards were designed prior to 1951. You would think one of them would have been the final missing player. Both Musial and Williams had started to push back on the use of their images. Might ESCO have pulled one of their cards from this run?

Could ESCO have printed all these player cards when they were first designed between 1946 and 1952, stored them for future use, united them with cards produced in 1953 and shipped them to Harry's Arcade in 1953? Knowing how cheaply ESCO produced cards and how likely it was that players would be cut or would retire in the next few years, it would have made no sense for ESCO to hang onto cards of guys like Hugh Mulcahy, Lefty Gomez, Johnny Rizzo or 274 actors and cowboys are in the find.

Gabby Hartnett who would soon be gone from the show. Hence, these boys are hard to find. ESCO didn't hang onto anything. They got the cardboard out the door as soon as they could. All of the cards in Wolfin's ESCO machine time capsule find had to be printed in 1953 regardless of the appearance of the card.

Thanks to Wolfin for sharing information about his find before the cards start heading out to new homes. ♦
